JIM VAN PELT GREY CUP HERO AS WINNIPEG SKINS TIGER-CATS

Up from Behind To Beat Champs

By JIM TANG
Colonist Sports Editor

VANCOUVER—Put down the name of Jim van Pelt alongside Fritzie Hanson and Jackie Parker and a few others who made Canadian football history with spectacular individual performances in the Grey Cup final.

Only 23 years old and a rookie in a tough league, the former University of Michigan signal-caller yesterday guided Winnipeg Blue Bombers to their second Canadian championship with a masterful exhibition of quarterbacking which cracked the touted defence of Hamilton's Tiger-Cats for 35 points. The game score was 35-28.

They Said He Panicked

He was a youngster who had been charged with panicking when his club got behind and there weren't many who believed he could rally his club when the Tiger-Cats slugged the partisan Winnipeg crowd by hurrying to that impressive-looking early lead.

But Van Pelt had been judged too hastily. Cool and poised and never showing a trace of pressure, he moved his club with a clever selection of plays which kept the Hamilton defence off balance. It was only fitting that Van Pelt's name will go into the record books for the 22 points he accounted for personally.

He had to be that good to stand out on a club which was good enough to spot a club like the Tiger-Cats 14 points and win. The Bombers had a lot of heroes.

One was Norm Rauhaus, a 22-year-old Canadian defensive back who was WIFU rookie of the year in 1956. Rauhaus blocked a kick in the very last seconds of the first half to score the touchdown which put Bombers ahead for the first time, then capped his biggest ever day by intercepting a pass late in the fourth quarter when the Tiger-Cats seemed headed for the tying touchdown.

Then there was Kenny Ploen, the 23-year-old sophomore quarterback who was injured early in the season, couldn't get his job back from Van Pelt, and remained with the club as a halfback to become a threat as a pass-catcher.

Yesterday, the former Iowa star was not only Van Pelt's favorite target but he went in on defence when the Bombers had trouble keeping tabs on speedy Ron Howell and polished off a fine performance by intercepting in the last minute to end Hamilton's last chance.

Unnoticed Aero-Makers

And then there were the fellows who do their job unnoticed by most fans and make it possible for the Van Pelt and Ploens to be noticed—linemen such as Steve Patrick and Roger Savoie and Herb Gray.

Patrick and Savoie, two Canadian tackles, yesterday made Gerry McDougall, Hamilton's big running threat, only an ordinary back with their tremendous line play and it was Patrick who forced Faloney to hurry the pass which Rauhaus intercepted.

Gray, a hard-nosed linebacker from University of Texas, stopped a Hamilton march in the second half with a second-down tackle which forced the Tiger-Cats to kick and then hit Faloney's arm on the pass which Ploen intercepted.

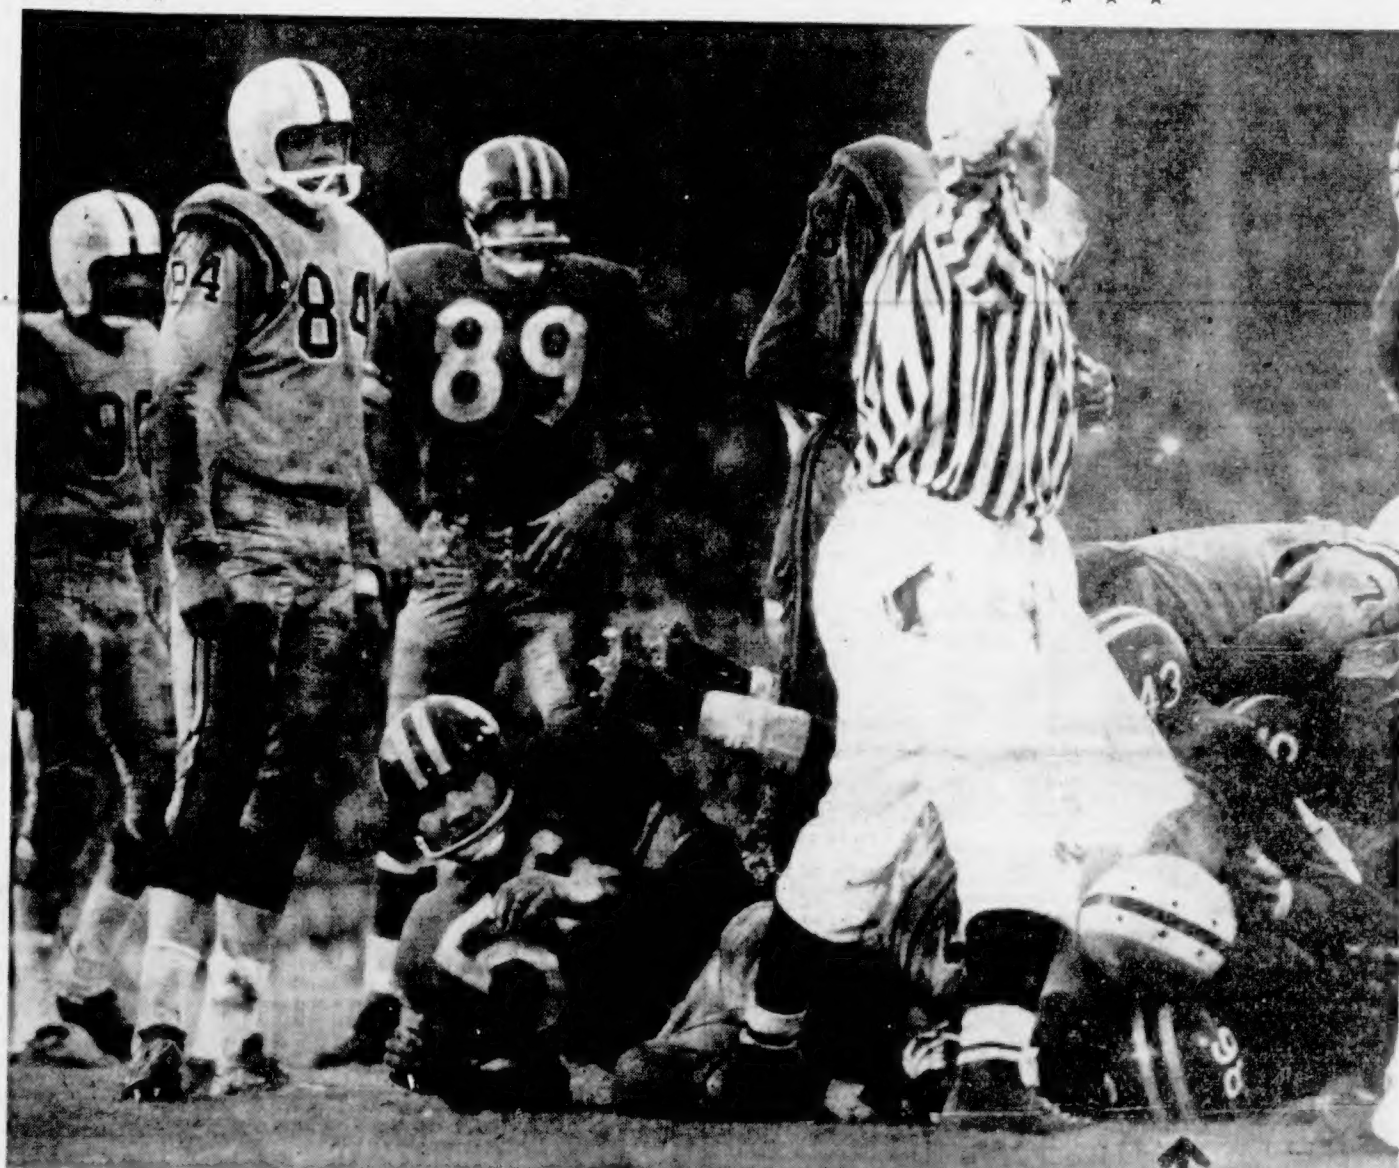

Those were the kind of players and the kind of plays which made it possible for the Bombers to whip a club which was favored to repeat last year's victory but they happened in a game which was everything it wasn't supposed to be.

This was supposed to be a defensive battle between two clubs which were the best in their respective leagues because they had the best defence, and it had been generally agreed that the Hamilton defence was so solid that the Bombers wouldn't have a chance unless they stayed close.

So, the Bombers won after dropping 14 points behind and Tiger-Cats lost, although they scored 28 points.

It made the 1958 Grey Cup game one of the most spectacular of all, a real fans' delight.

The Tiger-Cats are good, make no mistake on that. Bernie Faloney is an accomplished

He Wants the Moon

The woman in a plain, worn dress was talking to a visitor in her drab, upstairs apartment not far from downtown Victoria.

There was an embarrassing break in the conversation when the visitor asked the woman what sort of Christmas was in store for her four children.

A look of defeat crept into the woman's eyes. She looked out of the curtainless windows of the room.

Her five-year-old son, sitting quietly to one side, had been watching the grown-ups with wide, anxious eyes.

His gaze followed his mother's to the window and out to a round, full moon shining in a clear, evening sky.

In a wistful, piping voice he said suddenly:

"I'd sure like that big, yellow moon."

Embarrassment dissolved into laughter.

"Imagine him wanting the moon," the mother said, "when I can't even afford any Christmas presents for the kids."

Hard-Pressed Mother Can't Buy Any Gifts

Her husband deserted her five years ago. Since then she's been stretching every penny of the $140 monthly welfare assistance to buy enough groceries, second-hand shoes and clothes for her children. Fuel, gas and light bills and the $35 monthly rent swallow up the rest.

Often, especially at the end of the month, there isn't enough food to go around.

"Of course I go to the free food stall once a month," said the thin, drawn woman and some of the neighbors are very kind and we can't afford to be proud . . ."

The older boy, 10, is fond of reading and would like a good book. The tomboy of the family, an eight-year-old girl, is hoping for a pair of ice skates, and the younger boy wants a model helicopter.

The second girl, 6, has been dreaming about a big doll and buggy.

"We'll try to get a small tree for Christmas, just to get the feel of the season," the mother says. "But all these other things the kids are hoping for . . ."

The family is one of those that will benefit from The Daily Colonist's "500 Christmas Fund." If donations to the fund are generous and many, the family will have a full and happy Christmas this year.

Contributions to the fund may be sent to the Colonist's downtown office at 1215 Broad, or the main office at 2631 Douglas Street. (See bingo story on Page 2.)

Former Husband Of Duchess Dies

LONDON (AP)—Ernest Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor, died early Sunday after a long illness.

The 62-year-old businessman had been suffering from a throat ailment for more than a year.

Simpson's divorce in 1937 from Wallis Warfield of Baltimore made headlines around the world. The divorce freed her to marry King Edward VIII.

He once turned himself the "forgotten man" after the failure of his divorcee died down.

JUAN PERON

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Juan Peron said Saturday that "civil war is near in Argentina." He predicted the fall of President Arturo Frondizi's government within six months.

"I am ready to leave for Argentina whenever the people call for me," said the ex-dictator who ruled for a decade.

Two Thugs Terrorize Family

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI)—Two masked men terrorized a family last night and fled with $6,000.

The robbers beat Nicholas Stumplich—owner of a sausage firm—after he said he did not have the $25,000 they demanded.

Forty-nine-year-old Stumplich, his wife and daughter were forced to sit on the kitchen floor while the beating took place. Two younger children were forced into the family bathroom.

CHRISTMAS cards may be a trap for the unwary debtor, Hugh Garner warns in the December Liberty magazine.

"The hit-or-miss Christmas card, called a 'flyer,' is a favorite bait of finance companies, creditors, deserted wives and lawyers for the plaintiff," he says.

return address, and are signed 'Joe McGuire' or 'Doris Penfield.' They're mailed to citizens who, for various other reasons than modesty, do not want their correct address known to the world.

"By mailing them to the fugitive's last-known address, and having them correctly forwarded by the post office, many otherwise sensible lamsters are prevailed upon to reply to the fictitious sender.

"The moral is: Don't send a card back to Doris Penfield—she may be an auto-finance agency, or even your wife."

Garner uses up most of his space in this article denouncing Christmas cards—and then he confesses that he looks forward to getting and sending them, nevertheless. Most of us feel the same way, despite the sour faces that we make about the interchange of these odd little pieces of colored cardboard.

Talking about Christmas greetings: A new and peculiarly British Columbian series of cards has just come on the market. They're color prints featuring Haida Indian totem poles, painted by G. M. Abrams-Lytton, marketed by Klahow-ya Crafts.

Power in the Klahow-ya firm is Horace Kelly, son of Rev. Peter Kelly, Queen Charlotte-born United Church minister who lives in Nanaimo. The Kellys are Haidas.

One of the cards shows a totem pole surmounted by a Christmas candle. Is this a mixture of ill-assorted elements? Not necessarily. Many of the old-time carvers incorporated fresh material into their poles, like garden flowers and figures of white men in tall hats.

Kiwanis Issues Call For 400 'Blitzers'

Some 400 volunteer canvassers are still needed for Tuesday night's Kiwanis $100,000 blitz for senior citizens' homes.

Mrs. Norma Barton, executive secretary of the campaign for funds for an extension of Kiwanis Village, said more than 1,600 canvassers have submitted their names. At least 2,000 are needed for the blitz scheduled from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The need for canvassers in the Cloverdale and parts of the James Bay area is great. Mrs. Barton said. Also very few have volunteered to canvass in the area bounded by Tolmie, Cook and Quadra.

"We'd like to see persons, especially men with cars, volunteering to canvass anywhere in Victoria," Mrs. Barton said.

She said areas such as Gordon Head and Oak Bay are already filled and many canvassers are being asked to change canvass districts to fill the needs.

Sooke, Colwood, Langford, Sidney, Metchesin, Jordan River and Glen Lake will be canvassed by mail only.

Donations should be sent to 311 Jones Building, 723 Fort Street. Volunteers are asked to get in touch with any Kiwanis member or phone EV 5-3361.

Peeling Onions for Charity

This job makes some people cry, but Solarium Junior League members Terry Duncan, left, of 3065 Scott, and Jean Elder, of 2722 Bowker, managed to laugh their way through a mountain of onions being prepared for league's hot dog and coffee sales to "fish watchers" today at Goldstream River. Leaguers hope to reach total profit of $1,500 on sales during the salmon run. Today is last day of hot dog service.—(Colonist photo.)

France Elects New Assembly Today

Second Round at Polls

PARIS (AP)—France completes election of its new National Assembly today, with moderates and right-wingers in position to steamroller the battered Communist party.

Success for the candidates apparently will be in direct proportion to how closely they have tied themselves to Premier Charles de Gaulle and whether they have convinced the voter they have a refreshing new political outlook. The biggest single factor shaping up in the assembly—first under the infant Fifth Republic—will be the right-wing de Gaulle Union for a New Republic. The most imposing name in the assembly will be that of Jacques Soustelle, the political musclem behind the de Gaulle coalition.

Going down with the Communists will be virtually all of the serious-minded moderates de Gaulle had clearly wanted as a counterweight to the beefed-up right.

Mr. Maloney said that, although he was never fully convinced about Coffin's innocence, he had "the gravest doubts about his guilt."

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (CPI)—John Diefenbaker the hunter will return to Canada with a new weapon in his arsenal—a six-foot-long blowgun with a supply of poison-tipped bamboo darts.

Father-in-Law Of Pearkes Dies

William Frederick Utting Copeman, 87, father of Mrs. G. R. Pearkes, wife of Canada's defence minister, died here yesterday.

Mrs. Pearkes is flying here from Ottawa to attend the funeral service at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Christ Church Cathedral.

Mr. Copeman, 87, of 745 Newport Avenue, was a resident of Victoria since 1906. He was born in Norfolk, England.

Besides Mrs. Pearkes, he is survived by his widow, Sybil, at home; a son, J. U. Copeman, and a brother, Gordon, both of Victoria.

Only Yogis Need Apply

LONDON (UPI)—Parliament member Tom Brown told the House of Commons of an industrial accident claims tribunal which issued a certificate that said: "This man is fit for suitable work which does not involve standing, sitting, bending or lying down."

The blowgun and the darts, in an elaborately carved quiver, were presented to the Canadian prime minister during a half-hour visit yesterday to the Malay village of the Teruman tribe in the midst of verdant rubber groves 14 miles from this Malaysian capital.

The prime minister was accompanied by A. R. Menzies, Canadian high commissioner to Malaya. He watched a ceremonial dance by four villagers as two Malaysians pounded out the rhythm on a piece of timber with bamboo sticks.

Diefenbaker was momentarily taken aback when told that the darts presented to him were poisonous—tipped with ipoh, which can kill a monkey in 20 minutes or paralyze a human being.

Glis-Glis Eat Cuffs

HEMPSTEAD, England (UPI)—The glis-glises are getting so bad around Hempstead they ate the cuffs off a city councillor's pants.

The cuffs apparently tasted fine to the glis-glises. They didn't just nibble—they gobbled them down in large mouthfuls.

The health committee said it would call in the local rat catcher.

Glis-glises, the report said, are rat-like creatures with bushy tails. Some years ago a pair escaped from a nearby private zoo. They have multiplied.

Khrushchev May Come to Berlin

Reds Set Six-Month Deadline

BERLIN (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev called last night for a round-table conference of the war-time allies within six months on the future of Berlin.

In a statement at a Moscow diplomatic reception, Khrushchev stressed that if negotiations with the West had not begun within the six-month time limit set by Russia, then was next June 1 — just six months from now.

Britain suggested a Four Power conference with the United States, France and West Germany to consider the Western tactics in the crisis touched off Nov. 10 by Khrushchev's demand that the West get out of Berlin and his warning that Soviet occupation controls in the city would be handed over

In Moscow, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said Russia had a "strait jacket" for any "madmen" who try to maintain the four-power occupation status of Berlin after Russia hands over its occupation powers to the East Germans.

Izvestia denounced the informal western rejection of the Soviet Berlin proposals. It said western statements of determination to remain in Berlin were the language "not of reason... but of crude force."

Most Berliners looked for rapid Communist developments, including a possible early attempt to interfere with allied traffic along the land lifelines from West Germany, 110 miles away.

Propaganda chief Eisler, who jumped $23,500 bail after his contempt of Congress conviction and fled the United States aboard the Polish liner Batory in May, 1949, said flatly: "From June 1, 1959, in six months, the western powers will have to yield to negotiating with our (East German) authorities and recognizing our authorities if they wish to go to Berlin."

Junkman Willie Rich Vagrant

PHILADELPHIA — Willie Bracey, itinerant junkman worth a cool 36 2/3 per cent of a hoard of gold coins which may be worth $50,000, turned up in jail as a vagrant Saturday.

Willie found four tin cans Oct. 25, 1936. Inside were gold coins which might bring $50,000 at auction.

The other share will go to the estate of Dr. Macie Rieger, who died in 1949. The tin cans were found on her property.

WASHINGTON — Supreme court observers fear the illness of 76-year-old Justice Felix Frankfurter may force his retirement after 20 years on the high tribunal. Frankfurter suffered a "mild heart disturbance" yesterday.

DETROIT — Severin Turel, 52, noted Polish concert pianist and composer, suffered a fatal heart attack while performing at a recital Friday night.

BELGRADE — President Tito said Saturday night he is planning a tour of some Middle East and Asian countries soon, including the United Arab Republic, Indonesia and India.

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower Saturday sent greetings to President Tito to mark the 14th anniversary of the founding of the republic of Yugoslavia.

WASHINGTON — The White House staff is about to celebrate an unusual event.

On Dec. 8, Dwight Eisenhower will become the oldest president in U.S. history. He will be one day short of 68 years and eight weeks old, and one day older than William Henry Harrison when he died in office on April 4, 1841.

LONDON — The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, continues to make satisfactory progress after a hernia operation, his office has announced.

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth shopped early for Christmas at a big department store in fashionable Knightsbridge on Friday.

Most of her time was spent in the toy department looking at mechanical toys and big fluffy toy animals.

KINGSTREE, S.C. — Elder statesman Bernard Baruch, 88, was reported up and around yesterday and apparently recovered from a brief minor illness.

NEW YORK — Julius Klorfein, 79, who came to the United States at the age of 13 with $35 and became a millionaire cigar maker, died on Thursday at his home.

OTTAWA — Dr. John A. Stiles, 82, Ottawa, former full-time head of Canada's Boy Scout movement, died in hospital yesterday after a long illness.

LOS ANGELES — The 15-month-old daughter of actress Elizabeth Taylor went home from the hospital Saturday. The baby, Elizabeth Frances, was admitted Nov. 13 for treatment of pneumonia.

ATLANTA — It will be a family affair today when W. W. Schotanus is ordained as deacon in the Presbyterian church, Rev. W. M. Schotanus, his son, will be in charge of ceremonies.

Vice-President Nixon told Dulles Saturday he believes the Soviet pressure on West Berlin "will have the effect of weakening but of stiffening the NATO alliance in two respects."

The Allied powers, Nixon said, will rally to resist the "probing action of the Communist leaders." Also, he added, they will press Soviet officials for a workable agreement on the reunification of Germany. In each of these ways, Nixon predicted the Allies will react with strength.

Nixon asked Dulles to relay his views to Eisenhower, vacationing at Augusta, Ga.

feel their "demilitarized free city" plan for West Berlin at the end of that time.

Khrushchev thereby apparently extended the Soviet deadline for West Berlin. Presumably, if the talks started, the deadline would be pushed back and would be held in abeyance until the talks ended.

A Soviet embassy spokesman in East Berlin suggested that such talks could lead to revisions in the Soviet plan for Berlin which the West views as a Communist attempt to drive out the American, British and French garrisons and leave the western sectors at the mercy of the East German Communists.

The spokesman said that while the six-month time limit was flexible, the West would have to accept the basic Russian idea of a "free city." He added that the talks would have to show signs of progress before the Russians would agree to revise their terms.

In Moscow, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said Russia had a "strait jacket" for any "madmen" who try to maintain the four-power occupation status of Berlin after Russia hands over its occupation powers to the East Germans.

Izvestia denounced the informal western rejection of the Soviet Berlin proposals. It said western statements of determination to remain in Berlin were the language "not of reason... but of crude force."

Most Berliners looked for rapid Communist developments, including a possible early attempt to interfere with allied traffic along the land lifelines from West Germany, 110 miles away.

Propaganda chief Eisler, who jumped $23,500 bail after his contempt of Congress conviction and fled the United States aboard the Polish liner Batory in May, 1949, said flatly: "From June 1, 1959, in six months, the western powers will have to yield to negotiating with our (East German) authorities and recognizing our authorities if they wish to go to Berlin."

Vice-President Nixon told Dulles Saturday he believes the Soviet pressure on West Berlin "will have the effect of weakening but of stiffening the NATO alliance in two respects."

The Allied powers, Nixon said, will rally to resist the "probing action of the Communist leaders." Also, he added, they will press Soviet officials for a workable agreement on the reunification of Germany. In each of these ways, Nixon predicted the Allies will react with strength.

Nixon asked Dulles to relay his views to Eisenhower, vacationing at Augusta, Ga.

West Berliners were intrigued by reports that Khrushchev himself might come to Berlin.

But there was one indication that the West expected business as usual in Berlin. American hotelman Conrad Hilton and a party of celebrities arrived to attend the grand opening of the new multi-million dollar Berlin Hilton Hotel.

BERLIN (AP) — The Big Three and West Germany mapped strategy Saturday to meet the Soviet cold war of offensive against West Berlin. The British Foreign Office said the four Western powers will meet soon, probably in Bonn.

The British statement was welcomed in Bonn, where the West German government is plugging for a meeting of the four powers' foreign ministers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles will confer Sunday on Russia's campaign to shove the Western powers out of Berlin. The strategy meeting is expected to give fresh impetus to a Western search for counter-measures.

Pooling Strengths

THE question of civic union in the Greater Victoria area is not likely to be settled, either now or at any future time, on the negative approach of pride and prejudice. The basic reason for amalgamation is the pooling of strengths this would give to multiple, interlocking areas; badly retarded by four or five sets of rules for nearly everything, divided councils on all development, and an entirely human but stultifying habit of leaving community-wide improvements to someone else.

Harder than the solution of the financial or physical problems—both of which will yield to known procedures successfully tried and working in Canada—may be found the breaking down of isolated thinking. This in itself is the result of balkanization of the several municipalities; all within a radius of seven miles from the centre of the combined urban area, and two of them scarcely four miles from that centre at their outermost limits. It will require a conscious effort on the part of many individuals to surmount this inherent prejudice from the past. The salient fact, however, is that wholly new conditions have to be faced and dealt with.

One could cite traffic control, sanitation, sheer space to build anything, and an almost endless list of other requirements which balkanization has about brought to a dead end. Yet the Greater Victoria community is filling up with ever more people. "Living room" is nearly at an end in the city. Saanich has open spaces and whole new residential areas still to be serviced adequately. So it goes around the periphery of the overlapping region. Seen objectively, these lacks and conflicts are in large part complementary. What one municipality needs now another has. If the time should come when they will agree to pool their natural assets (paying off their own debts separately) what they would achieve would be to unite their strengths. In this, the capital area, such a development has been long overdue.

Taking Off the Strings

THE Victoria federal member, Mr. A. deB. McPhillips, says a resolution will come up in Parliament next session on "the subject of allowing old-age pensioners to live where they please. There is something to be said for citizens staying in the country which gives them the pension, but the argument is greatly weakened when it means they must stay in near-penury."

That is the principal reason for advocacy of residential freedom for old-age pensioners. For people to whom this is the sole or large part of their income the pension allowance bears hardly in these days of high living costs, which probably will keep on getting higher. Many might like to go to Britain, for example, where the exchange rate would spread the pension allowance much farther. The residential concession would help them to live decently instead of in comparative distress.

A factor worth noting is that the old-age pension is deemed to have been earned by 20 years' work and residence in Canada. It is not charity. It is contributory via the tax route. There are no bars on other state pensioners staying where they like in retirement. Civil servants, military and other government personnel receiving superannuation benefits are not put in a straight-jacket. They are free to come and go as they desire.

The state would not suffer by releasing the old-age pensioners. Only a minor number would pack up and leave the country. If they stay in any case the treasury outlay goes on; there would be no additional outlay in paying them wherever they may be. Old-age pensioners of small means have not had too much of this world's goods or they would not now be in difficult straits. It would be a humane gesture to take the strings off their pensions.

More Hardship for the Old

INCREASED bus fares fall heaviest on elderly people eking out a bare existence on pensions, and the city welfare committee is to be commended for the interest it is taking in their behalf. All those who use the buses regularly have felt the latest boost in fares, but none so severely as those whose slender income cannot be stretched any farther to meet the rising costs of all essentials. The increase means breaking into a second dime to provide the extra three cents, and to them a dime is more precious than a dollar is to most other people.

To many old people bus travel is essential; to most of them it affords the only means of reaching the few simple pleasures left—visits to the library, to pensioners' meetings, to anything that is free. The 26-cent fare for just one round trip may make heavy inroads into the pitifully small amount of money available for rent, food, clothing. For those who cannot walk far the alternative is virtual imprisonment in the cramped, often cold space which for lack of anything better they must call home.

While the arrangement of a satisfactory system of free bus passes or reduced fares may present some difficulties, surely they should not be insuperable. In its efforts in that direction the welfare committee will have the support of all kind-hearted taxpayers even if a plan of relief would entail some public expense.

Any More Skeletons?

... We are wondering if there are any other skeletons in the Social Credit closet? There is no suggestion on our part that there is anything wrong but for a government whose main platform is "the government that keeps you informed" we appear to be so much in the dark.

Why have we never had a finance minister, other than Premier Bennett; and why, too, is Einar Gunderson, a man repudiated by the electors, so deep in provincial government dealings?

Who stands to make what? And other than being a sucker, where does John Q. Public stand?

Powerless Trustees

There is a moral to be found in the recent elections of school trustees in both Saanich and Salt Spring School Districts. In both areas the trustees already holding office were re-elected unless they, themselves, decreed otherwise. The re-election suggests a significant indication in the mild, but deep-rooted controversy regarding education in its different ramifications...

When the annual meetings arise it is very evident that ratepayers attach no blame to the local semi-autonomous boards of trustees. They know full well that not only is a trustee unable to take any corrective action over matters of administration, but that in many cases the trustees themselves are just as concerned over these matters as any of the ratepayers.

The elections indicate that the boasted autonomy of the local school districts is a pleasing allegiance to democratic theory rather than a concrete fact.

Practice What You Preach

An appeal has been made to the municipalities to do "winter work," with a promise of financial assistance towards labor costs. Industry, likewise, has been asked to co-operate in putting over projects until the winter months—but what about the governments themselves?

In our area, we are particularly fortunate in having a large Department of National Defence installation. We understand that there are several projects pending on this base. Housing for RCAF personnel is still on the critical list, yet we are still just talking about a further 100 houses at the PMQ. On the provincial scene, our dilapidated structure known as Courtenay River Bridge has never been in worse condition. It could be built during the winter.

Roadside Christmas Trees

The cry will soon go up, officially and unofficially, that the young forests are being despoiled by those in search of Christmas trees.

A look along the right-of-way of our V.I. highway reveals a rare opportunity for the government to play Santa Claus to many of its tax-ridden and harried subjects. There are literally thousands of young Christmas trees along this public strip, just waiting to be cut.

It would be a stupid waste of resources if these ideal young trees are put to the axe and burned or reduced to chips on the spot by right-of-way maintenance crews.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

A DAILY EXPRESS writer warns the people of Britain that by 1999 Canada will have a 70-million population and will be the centre of Commonwealth interest. Australia, too, may encroach on British importance by then, with an expected population of 45 millions. Unless I live to be a centenarian, however, I shall not witness these startling changes.

I shall not know, for example, if by 1999 the Commonwealth is confined only to white nations, or in fact if by the end of the century it still exists as such at all. There might easily be a new amalgam of English-speaking nations—for their own protection.

A lady asks if I will lend her my copy of "The Island of Sheep." Certainly I will, and it is now in my office awaiting her call.

White cuffs on traffic officers is a good idea, it should help to prevent them being run down in the dark. A pity that pedestrians, especially elderly ones, couldn't wear them also. A motorist's chief worry at night is not other cars but persons on foot, and most civilian clothing seems then of sombre hue. In fact if pedestrians unfamiliar with car driving knew how hard it is to see them, particularly on a wet night, they'd never step off the sidewalk.

A correspondent suggests I tip-toed through the tulips the other day by implying but not charging the clergy with either wit or wisdom, and that "you must know that in these days of scientific knowledge the wearing of a dog-collar indicates damned little wisdom."

The fact is I was walking firmly on my heels and I don't know anything of the sort. In the matter of wisdom I'd back wearers of dog-collars against scientists any day.

Telling a service club something of the work of the Mounties the assistant commissioner here confessed he watches TV who-dun-it films—doubtless with a raised eyebrow—because he is intrigued by the ease with which television detectives can wrap up every case within the prescribed half-hour, not counting time-off for the commercials. In real life things are vastly different, as witness the 223,877 inquiries made in B.C. alone last year by the RCMP.

One of the peculiarities of popular literature is the star treatment of private-eyes and other amateur investigators who allegedly put official policemen in the shade. In fact the opposite is the case. The who-dun-it realm is one sphere wherein fiction is so much stranger than truth.

This is to answer a feminine correspondent of recent date and to say simply that there is no established church in Canada and thus it is neither a Protestant nor a Roman Catholic country. It is a land of two official languages and there are Canadians of both these faiths. The high offices of state are no more the prerogatives of Protestants than they are of Catholics.

Much of Burns I have taken for granted like many other people, including the well-known Selkirk Grace which begins, "Some hae meat and canna eat," and which in January will be quoted at festive functions all over the world in celebration of the poet's bi-centenary. I have only just discovered that the Ayrshire Bard didn't write it.

Apparently varying versions of this homely grace existed a hundred years before Burns, and it was a Burns' editor, Alan Cunningham, who altered one version to its present form and palmed it off as Burns' work in an edition of the bard's poems in 1834. Many subsequent editions copied on.

Are These Buttons Necessary?

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

BRITAIN has been eternally famous as the home of lost causes. It is the land where anyone may form a society for or against anything. We even have a Society of Individualists which is just about as paradoxical an achievement as possible. The latest adventure is a society designed to encourage conversation whilst travelling.

Foreigners (and others) always proclaim English reserve. They never fail to retail endless stories when they get back to their native land of pig-like grunts of resentment if they happen to comment that it is a beautiful day. Foreigners are much too polite to comment on other and more frequent aspects of the English weather. They tell of people whose mothers have told them never to speak to strangers, of clouts on the ear when they have dared to tell a distant English maid how beautiful she is, and of the insufferable sniggers in a theatre where the normal human being would be indulging in a belly laugh.

It is so obviously a national characteristic that neither the British Information Services nor the British Council (both designed to implant a love of these ancient islands in the hearts of misunderstanding aliens) could do anything about it. Obviously it was a matter for private enterprise—and for a society.

An imaginative foreigner faced with such an unimagined problem (it would of course be unbelievable had he not been here) would no doubt have launched out into a Friendly Souls Society or Conversations Anonymous group—but not the staid English. No. As a matter of sober fact they have launched the Conversing Travellers' Association and to make things nice and easy and to avoid any danger of anyone saying "Good morning" to anyone who did not wish to be said good morning to, they wear a neat silver and blue badge—and that is the symbol of the conversing traveller.

We are advised by advertisements in public vehicles that anyone wearing one of these antifreeze badges will be prepared to discuss the weather or current affairs with anyone. I must confess that I have not yet sighted one of these badges and therefore cannot report on results. I remain hopeful—for I am sure that an officially conversing traveller would be a marvellous companion. I am equally sure that in no other country in the world would it be possible to launch such an association. We have many fewer service clubs and probably fewer dogooders in this land of the welfare state than in Canada, but the idea of a conversational button of identity is surely a unique British achievement.

Reluctantly I am bound to ask whether these buttons are really necessary. The other day I was travelling on the top of a bus down Whitehall. It was just before 4 o'clock and a traffic jam held us up right opposite a crowded government office. The ladies and gentlemen, who are our servants, were draped on the edges of tables, leaning against filing cabinets, and the odd one sitting on a chair. Undoubtedly it was the afternoon tea break that great English tradition essential for the smooth working of a militant democracy.

In the front seat of the bus was a rugged individualist—a typical Mrs. Mopps, a balloon-like figure with large Queen Mary hat bedecked with fruit and flowers and simply bursting with amiable arrogance. She turned to me in the seat behind with an explosive "Look at 'em. Look at the lazy baskets!" With traditional English reserve, and possibly because I was not wearing a button, I turned a deaf ear and buried my nose in an evening paper.

Mrs. Mopps was undeterred. She stood up. She addressed the top of the bus as a public meeting. "Look at the lazy baskets!" she repeated with a deafening roar. "They take seven bob out of my measly pay packet to pay them baskets. It's robbery. What yer going to do about it?"

No one showed any inclination of doing anything about it. Those who had no newspapers buried their noses in their neighbor's paper, and fortunately the bus started. Another hundred yards and another halt. It was another office. Different people but the same drama.

"Can yer believe it? Another bunch of the baskets. They take me seven bob so those baskets can drink tea. I 'as to work for my living I 'as—why don't they? Set about 'em we should."

By this time the conductor had arrived on top.

"Pipe down, ma. Pipe down," he cautioned.

"Why should I? It's a free country. Why should we pay those baskets?"

"Language, ma—language. Naughty. We're all too young."

"A lot of 'lippin' asterisks. That's what they are!" Fortunately the bus started again. As it nosed around the corner and across Westminster Bridge the sight of tea-soaking civil servants vanished and with it the irritation to the rugged individualist. A few "makes me boil, it do" and all was silent.

I parted company at Waterloo, but I wondered whether the conversing travelling association was really necessary—or could it be that Mrs. Mopps was really its president and had forgotten her button?

But no one can say that this is not a land of paradox with an occasional refreshing gale of volatile individualism.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

ONE of my playmates in my early childhood was remarkable in my eyes, even then, for the fact that he always had food on his face.

"A lot of 'lippin' asterisks. That's what they are!" Fortunately the bus started again. As it nosed around the corner and across Westminster Bridge the sight of tea-soaking civil servants vanished and with it the irritation to the rugged individualist. A few "makes me boil, it do" and all was silent.

I parted company at Waterloo, but I wondered whether the conversing travelling association was really necessary—or could it be that Mrs. Mopps was really its president and had forgotten her button?

But no one can say that this is not a land of paradox with an occasional refreshing gale of volatile individualism.

It is 40 years since that last meeting. It seems he has been enjoying a great career, for a Canadian, as a fairly senior executive of one of the mighty American automotive industries. I met him in Chicago, Illinois, yesterday. I saw him first and recognized him, despite what the years had done to his face and figure. He was talking to a lady in the hotel lobby, and I went and stood by, waiting for him to glance my way.

When he did so, and jumped to greet me, do you know what?

On his chin was a little crumb of dried spaghetti.

Some people never really change.

FOUR Liberals, one Independent and one CCF member were elected to the provincial legislature 25 years ago in a deferred election for Victoria and Vancouver Centre.

All the successful candidates were destined to become well-known in B.C. affairs. Byron Johnson, Liberal, and John Hart, Liberal, headed the polls in Victoria, with 7,752 and 6,189 votes respectively.

Third was Herbert Anscomb, Independent. 5,723 and fourth was Rev. Robert Connell, CCF, 5,584. Johnson, Hart, Anscomb and Connell were all elected to the four-seat constituency.

Losers by a narrow margin were J. B. Clearfue, Liberal, 5,391; Dr. Clem Davies, Independent, 5,182; Ald. Kinsman, 5,085, and others.

Hon. Gordon Sloan attorney-general, and Gordon Wismer, on the two-seat Vancouver Centre constituency for the Liberals. Mr. Sloan, who at 35 was B.C.'s youngest attorney-general, had come through the test of winning a place in the legislature, a test which had faced him since he took office with other members of Premier T. D. Pattullo's government, November 15, 1933.

Sir Arthur Currie, who led the Canadian Corps to victory in France in the 1914-18 war, died in Montreal 25 years ago today—on Nov. 30, 1933.

Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that B.C.'s Succession Duty Act was invalid because it technically constituted an indirect tax. A province is empowered to levy only a direct tax.

Alfred E. Smith attacked President Franklin D. Roosevelt's monetary program. Smith, long-time Democratic governor of New York and 1928 presidential candidate who had been nominated by Roosevelt himself, said: "I am for gold dollars as against baloney dollars."

MORE than 100 lives were lost when the steamer Sardinia, bound from Liverpool to Alexandria, burned off Valetta, Malta, 50 years ago.

F. M. Rattenbury, the well-known architect, had sold his holdings in the Nechako Valley for $100,000 to Trafalgar Huteson, an Englishman located in Seattle.

"These lands were carefully selected by Mr. Rattenbury about five years ago, and lie along the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific. He took up altogether about 11,000 acres, all of which Mr. Huteson has purchased. Mr. Rattenbury (also has) 20,000 acres in the Bulkley Valley. These he retains."

"WE are sorry to have to state that the residence of A. F. Pemberton, Esq., was totally destroyed by fire Saturday morning." The Daily British Colonist reported politely 95 years ago.

"The alarm was given by the fire bells shortly after eight o'clock... The fire companies got out their engines as soon as possible and endeavored to reach the scene of the disaster, but owing to the extremely muddy state of the streets they had only proceeded about half way up Fort Street when they learned that the house had burned down..."

Hand power was too slow, the Colonist complained. "In many of the well-regulated fire departments of the eastern provinces it is a custom of the municipal authorities to offer a reward to the first pair of horses which reach the engine house in time to assist in dragging the engine to the fire, and also a reward to the first waterman who shall reach the spot with a barrel of water."

"Similar regulations might be made in this city."

Old-Time Politics

The shades of Hon. Joseph Martin, to whom I have listened on many occasions, never gave us a better old-time political meeting than did our premier and the pupils of Victoria College on Wednesday afternoon. Both of them were just tops; the students asked a great many pertinent questions, and the premier had the meeting in hand at all times.

In my opinion, anyone who heard that broadcast and is not convinced as to who is the premier of this province, and that he certainly does know his stuff, will never be convinced of anything in politics.

Hopeful Pensioners

I would like to congratulate Mr. McPhillips, MP for Victoria, for his interest in the welfare of the old-age pensioners of Canada. I think that if the pensioners were allowed to go wherever they wish to live, with relatives or friends in warmer climates, and not worry about losing their pension, it would eventually be less expensive to the government of Canada. As it is now, most of the pensioners' money is spent on doctors' bills and drugs. I think it's up to all of us pensioners to get behind Mr. McPhillips and his resolution.

Mighty China Growing

Clever, Organized, Hurried

Gerald Clark of Montreal tells the story of a Communist China in this series of articles written from Hong Kong after a five-week tour of the mainland.

By GERALD CLARK
North American Newspaper Alliance

Nine years ago China couldn't produce an aspirin; today it makes all the penicillin and antibiotics its hospitals need. Last year China didn't manufacture a single farm tractor; this year it turned out 20,000—and the target for next year is 200,000.

Between the figures is a story of the most phenomenal transformation in human history. China can no longer be regarded as an ineffectual nation living on soya beans and quaint Confucian sayings. Within the next 10 years it is likely to outstrip Britain industrially. Politically, in the same period, the centre of world attention may well switch from Moscow to Peking.

They're clever, these Chinese.

Peasants in some farmfields put up seesaws for the children. Now the kids, while bobbing up and down, are pumping water for irrigation ditches.

The Chinese are also in a hurry. Students at a technical institute designed and built a twin-engine aircraft in 100 days and nights. It flies.

I visited a machine tool factory in Peking, a city whose only industry once had been a brewery. Two months ago a horde of 3,000 construction workers started to erect a wing covering 16,000 square yards. To save time they installed prefabricated concrete pillars first, then the roof, and before the brick walls went up the lathes were turning.

This year the plant is producing 1,300 milling machines; next year, 5,000.

In a country that always thought in terms of centuries, the current slogan is, "Twenty years are concentrated in one day." So feverish has been "the great leap forward" this year that the Chinese themselves cannot keep even future estimates apace with actual production.

The Chinese claim that they've doubled their grain output (to 350,000 tons) so that today they're second only to the Americans as wheat growers. They say that China is now the biggest cotton producer in the world. This year they're producing 10,700,000 tons of steel, the same quantity as France. Next year, they vow, they'll double this and match Britain's capacity.

You don't have to be a trained engineer to understand how it's done. Look outside your hotel window; the waiters, the cooks, the receptionists are sweating at tiny blast furnaces, turning out iron ingots in their spare time. Take a train journey; for hundreds of miles, along the entire route the night is lit up by a thousand beacons—pin pricks of flame that shoot upward from the blast furnaces of peasants. It is an awesome sight that tells of a massed, surging movement of 650,000,000 people.

The blast furnaces are crude affairs, built at virtually no cost of brick and earth, and not much bigger than a household furnace. But they serve the purpose—to convert scrap metal or plentiful ore, brought from the hills in endless convoys of bullock carts, into 300,000 tons of pig iron a day. This iron then goes to the big mills at Anshan, Manchuria, or Shanghai, for conversion into steel and machinery.

In July, soon after the current drive started, there were 30,000 blast furnaces. Today there are anywhere from 300,000 to 700,000.

Maybe the Chinese won't be able to maintain the frantic pace much longer. There are already signs that the government recognizes that fatigue is setting in. But meanwhile it is this kind of drive that has given China its first home-produced motorcars and buses, its first bridge—a mile long—over the Yangtze River, turbine generators and diesel locomotives, television transmitters and oil wells. It has also given China a cyclotron and an ambition to become an atomic power.

In some ways, the transformation is like a religious revival. Certainly all the overtones of fervor and fanaticism are prevalent, especially among younger people.

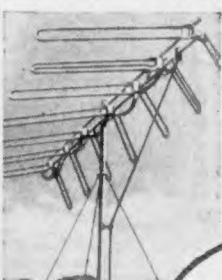

A student I met had just returned from two months' work on a farm (all students must now combine education with manual labor—an effort to achieve a classless society). In June he spent three weeks on the Ming Tombs reservoir and dam, a mammoth earthen structure 25 miles west of Peking. Between 200,000 and 400,000 others from the city—men, women and children—worked on the project, carting gravel, clay and stones in buckets slung over their shoulders on poles. They slept in the open, supplied their own food and received no pay. They finished the dam—630 yards long, 175 yards wide, 30 yards high—in 160 days.

'Brave New World' Almost Upon Us

One of the world's great thinkers, famed novelist Aldous Huxley drew a chilling picture in his best-selling "Brave New World" of a super-organized society and mankind enslaved by mind control. He set the time scene centuries in the future. But now he finds he was wrong—the "Brave New World" is almost upon us. In this thoughtful series he tells how and why.

By ALDOUS HUXLEY

In 1931, when "Brave New World" was being written, I was convinced that there was still plenty of time.

The completely organized society, the scientific caste system, the abolition of free will by methodical conditioning, the servitude made acceptable by regular doses of chemically-induced happiness, the orthodoxies drummed in by nightly courses of sleep-teaching—these things were coming, all right, but not in my time, not even in the time of my grandchildren.

Twenty-seven years later, in this third quarter of the 20th Century A.D., I feel a good deal less optimistic. The prophecies made in 1931 are coming true much sooner than I thought they would.

In the West, it is true, individual men and women still enjoy a large measure of freedom. But even in those countries that have a tradition of democratic government, this freedom and even the desire for this freedom seem to be on the wane.

In the rest of the world freedom for individuals has already gone, or is manifestly about to go.

The nightmare of total organization, which I had situated in the "Seventh Century After Ford," has emerged from the safe, remote future and is now awaiting us, just around the next corner.

Impersonal forces, over which we have almost no control, are pushing us toward that nightmare; and the pushing is being accelerated by the representatives of political or commercial organizations, employing scientific methods for controlling the interests of a minority, the opinions, feelings and actions of the masses.

What are these forces? And why has the nightmare of too much order made so swift and sudden an advance? Our answer must begin where the life even of the most highly civilized society has its beginning—on the level of biology.

On the first Christmas Day the population of our planet was about 250,000,000—less than half the population of modern China.

By the time of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, world population had passed the 700,000,000 mark.

In 1931, when I was writing "Brave New World," it stood at just under 2,000,000,000.

Today, only 27 years later, there are 2,800,000,000 of us. And tomorrow—what? Penicillin, DDT and clean water are cheap commodities, whose effects on public health are out of all proportion to their cost. Even the poorest government is rich enough to provide its subjects with a substantial measure of death control. Birth control is a very different matter.

Death control is something which can be provided for a whole people by a few techni-

lans working in the pay of a benevolent government. Birth control depends on the co-operation of an entire people.

Moreover, there are nowhere any religious traditions in favor of unrestricted death, whereas religious and social traditions in favor of unrestricted reproduction are widespread.

In consequence, human numbers are now increasing more rapidly than at any time in the history of the species. Moreover, the yearly increases are themselves increasing.

At the present time the annual increase in world population runs to about 43,000,000. This means that every four years mankind adds to its numbers the equivalent of the present population of the United States, every 32 years the equivalent of the present population of India.

At the rate of increase prevailing between the birth of Christ and the death of Queen Elizabeth I it took 16 centuries for the population of the earth to double. At the present rate it will double in less than half a century.

And this fantastically rapid doubling of our numbers will be taking place on a planet whose most desirable and productive areas are already densely populated, whose soils are being eroded by the frantic efforts of bad farmers to raise more food, and whose easily available mineral capital is being squandered with reckless extravagance.

In the brave new world of my time, the problem of human numbers in their relation to natural resources had been effectively solved. An optimum figure for world population had been calculated and numbers were maintained at this figure a little under 2,000,000,000. If I remember rightly, generation after generation.

In the real contemporary world, the population problem has not been solved. As the 20th century wears on, as the new billions are added to the existing billions, there will be more than 5,500,000,000 of us by the time my granddaughter is 50; this biological background will advance, ever more insistently, toward the front and centre of the historical stage.

The problem of rapidly increasing numbers in relation to natural resources, to social stability and to the well-being of individuals—this is now the central problem of mankind; and it will remain the central problem certainly for another century, and perhaps for several centuries thereafter.

A new age is supposed to have begun on Oct. 4, 1957. But actually, in the present context, all our exuberant post-Sputnik talk is irrelevant and even non-existent—so far as the masses of mankind are concerned the coming time will not be the space age; it will be the age of over-population. And even if, at some future date, emigration to Mars should become feasible, the shipping of a few surplus humans to Mars (at a cost, for transportation and development, of several million dollars a head) will do nothing to solve the problem of mounting population pressures on our own planet.

Unsolved, that problem will render insoluble all our other problems. Worse still, it will create conditions in which individual freedom and the social decencies of the democratic way of life will become impossible, almost unthinkable.

Plukker Conducts Symphony Today

HENRY PLUKKER

A conductor with international associations, Henry Plukker, directs the Victoria Symphony Orchestra in the fourth pair of concerts at the Royal Theatre this afternoon and tomorrow evening.

Mr. Plukker has been connected with such famous orchestras as the Amsterdam Concertgebouw and the Dutch Philharmonic, and now conducts the Calgary Symphony.

This weekend's programs open with a Trumpet Voluntary by Henry Purcell (1659-1695).

Tchaikovsky's Sixth (Pathetic) Symphony is the item following.

Von Reznicek's overture to "Donna Diana" opens the second half of the program. The polytonal "Suite Française" of Darius Milhaud follows, and Georges Enesco's "First Romanian Rhapsody" completes the program.

Bells Jangling Since Halloween

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—No place in the wide world does Christmas come so early, or so fantastically, as to Hollywood.

This year it set a new mark. A big department store sneaked one over on a competitor and unveiled its rocket-travelling Santa Claus on Halloween. Other shopkeepers were quick to follow and so today—nearly a month before the festive day—jolly Santa Claus is on every business corner.

Off Broadway or On Little Different Now

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP)—Every day in every way, little and big Broadway are getting closer and closer.

All the good shows are no longer on the glitter half-mile of the Great White Way. Now, at the end of the first three months of this theatrical season, here is the remarkable situation:

On Broadway, 20 productions have bowed, 13 are still running, eight seem sure of box-office success.

Off-Broadway, 25 plays have opened, 14 continue on view. At least seven have justified their sponsor's fond hopes.

ROBERT TAYLOR

Robert Taylor Changes Jobs

Wiser to Go Long Ago

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—"I'd have been wise to have left Metro six years ago," said Robert Taylor on the set of his first movie away from Metro since 1937, Paramount's "The Hangman."

"I was hotter than a pistol then, with 'Ivanhoe,' 'Knights Of The Round Table' and 'Quo Vadis.' But it's hard to leave a studio where you have worked for 24 years.

I hated to go, and I still have two more pictures to make for them. But I couldn't save any money there on a straight salary, and I want to be able to make enough in the next three years so that I can retire and buy a big ranch."

Now that he can pick his own pictures, is he picking them better?

"That remains to be seen," Bob said. "But what I have done is to establish a price—$200,000 and a percentage of the gross—and that is a good thing. I will make two or three pictures a year at this price and the money, because of the percentage, will be spread over a long period of time and this way I will have something to show for my acting career."

Taylor's starting salary at Metro was $35 a week. He has come a long way since he was signed under his real name of Spangler Arlington Brugh.

"Magnificent Obsession," with Irene Dunne in 1935, was the picture that got me going," he recalled. "Then came 'Camille' with Greta Garbo, when I was 25 years old. I still love acting and I'm looking for good pictures. But I can't understand why I don't get as excited as I used to. 'I don't get bored making movies, mind you, but now it comes as second nature, and I wonder if I'm as good now as I was then. I think I'll get excited with good parts again.'"

Wife Ursula Theiss, in Bob's words, "Likes to work occasionally."

"I don't mind too much her working, with certain stipulations—no long locations, no leaving me holding the sack. That was the trouble with my marriage to Barbara Stanwyck. We had such long separations. And when you get together again, things aren't quite the same. You both have new ideas and interests."

"I'm an outdoor man. I like to hunt and fish. And I fly my own plane. Ursula likes to do these things with me. We flew a week ago with my two big dogs to Sacramento for some hunting, then to the Rogue River for some fishing. I don't care too much for city life, although we live in the city while I make pictures.

"My father was a doctor, but every free moment I had was spent on a farm. And when Ursula and I get our retirement place, we'll raise pigs and chickens and keep horses and dogs. I love animals."

In addition to the house

Off the Record

Christmas in Hi-Fi

By JIM TAYLOR

Shelves in the various record shops have taken on a somewhat different appearance of late. The rock 'n' rollers have been shunted to the back, upstaged by jolly old St. Nick and various assorted choruses.

Personally, we can't see the percentage in buying Christmas music. The records are played for a week at the most, then slipped into dust covers and ignored until Joyeux Noel.

to buy some, there is an enormous selection.

One company, Decca, has 54 Christmas single records and 34 LPs on its latest list. Others aren't far behind. "Jingle Bells," "Silent Night" and the others get their usual seasonal working over, and a great many traditional carols are being released.

It would be impossible to play and listen to all this Christmas in Hi-Fi, but we did try quite a few LPs. Here are some that stood out: "Merry Christmas"—Johnny Mathis, a youngster with one of the finest voices in the music business, is as effective as ever in this blend of serious and pop Christmas songs. Billboard Magazine's pick of the Christmas music.

"Christmas Carols"—Billy Vaughn's orchestra, which along with Pat Boone provides the big reason for the tremendous popularity of Dot Records, is at its best here in a superb collection of serious tributes to Christmas. The Vaughn chorus provides a lush vocal setting for some of the carols.

"The Columbia Album of Christmas Music"—For those with the necessary cash, this collection by Percy Faith's fine orchestra is a must. A double LP, it contains 28 selections, and in each Faith has managed, without the assistance of any vocal accompaniment, to bring in a real Christmas atmosphere.

"Christmas Sing-Along With Mitch"—As reported here before, the Mitch Miller "sing-along" series has left me cold up to this point. But the LP would provide a lot of fine entertainment for those who like to gather round the fireplace and sing. Another advantage of this one is the addition of nine song sheets with the words to all the songs on the disc.

For those who missed it earlier, we present a repeat of a recent announcement. Elvis Presley has been promoted to private first class. Tennessee will likely declare a national holiday.

BITS AND PIECES: Brenda Lee, the peppy little youngster referred to as "Little Miss Dynamite," has released two novelty sides for Decca. One (no kidding) is called "Rock Around the Christmas Tree"; the other is "Papa Noel."

Roberta Sherwood has an effective release in "If I Can Help Somebody," the official song of this year's Christmas Seal campaign. Cozy Cole, whose "Topsy" has been such a big pop jazz hit, has a sequel. Naturally, it's called "Turvy."

Bill Haley, who didn't make it as big as expected with "Whoo Mabel," tries again with "Corrina, Corrina," a rock 'n' roller that enjoyed limited success about two years ago. Billy Grammer's version of "Gotta Travel On" has made the top 10 on the national survey. Still the leader: "To Know Him Is To Love Him" by the Teddy Bears. "It's All in the Game" by Tommy Edwards has dropped to 11th place after 14 weeks in the top 10.

Statistics released last week show that Canada's record collectors bought 11,560,769 discs in the first nine months of the year at a retail value of $20,548,218.

Rich Variety On This Week

By BERT BINNY

Like the lull before the storm, Tuesday and Wednesday are quiet, but for the rest of the week there is a rich variety of live entertainment—two plays, two jazz attractions and a recital.

Elmer Gull, a highly regarded performer on both the piano and vibraphone, appears to help celebrate the first birthday of the Victoria Jazz Society on Thursday evening.

With his own trio he will be at the Club Sirocco at 8:30 p.m. Thursday. Also featured will be the trio of Buddy Glover and Bob Miller of Victoria and Terry Hawkeye of Vancouver.

At the Progressive Artists' Society, 1305 Wharf Street, Friday and Saturday, will be CBC singing star Pat Morgan, with the first show each night at 10:30.

St. Luke's Players open J. B. Priestley's "Laburnum Grove" at St. Luke's Hall, also on Thursday, with a three-night stand in prospect. The director is Harry Lukey and curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

There is first rate material here both as to cast and author.

"Laburnum Grove" first appeared in 1933. The St. Luke's cast will be Evonne Murray, Belle Davis, Susan Gibson, Alec Hutchins, Charles Gibson, Bob Crawford, Alec Small and Don Hart.

Victoria High School's presentation of "Lust For Life" can be seen Friday or Saturday in the school auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

The play, which concerns the life of Vincent van Gogh, is a dramatization by Elizabeth Jamieson of Irving Stone's novel.

Director is Thomas W. Mayne and the settings are by Ken and Katie Bloomfield.

Victoria Branch of the Registered Music Teachers' Association presents a students' recital at Newstead Hall at 8 p.m., Friday.

The affair is designed to put musical promise on display and to accustom students to public performance.

Leave Men Alone Awhile

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Do American men need more time among themselves?

Fernando Lamas thinks so, if they are not to be dominated by their wives.

This could stir up a hornet's nest of female indignation, but the Argentine actor doesn't mind. He feels it is important for males to be the victors in the age-old battle of the sexes. "In Latin America, we have a very fine custom—the after-work cafe," Lamas said. "When the men finish their jobs for the day, they drop by for a drink of some coffee. They talk against their employers and their wives and get it out of their systems. Then they go home happy."

"In this country, men have little opportunity for fellowship with each other. They go directly home to their wives. 'Because of this, they are in danger of losing their masculinity.'"

Events List Would End Conflicts

Victoria Chamber of Commerce should instigate an "events committee" for all local clubs, to prevent conflicting dates of big events, a member of the Victoria Celebrations Association feels.

"In a town of this size there should definitely be an organization which keeps track of what clubs do and when they do it," said S. H. Farris, president of the Victoria Kinsmen Club.

He felt the Chamber of Commerce would be best equipped for the job.

Conductor Asks Help Of Parents

Parents must support the program of youth concerts by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, conductor Hans Gruber told Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council on Friday.

He said cost will be about $2,000 for each of three concerts, with an additional $2,000 for transportation. And he warned there is a chance the city might lose future Canada Council grants if no interest is shown locally.

The council named a committee to discuss with the school board possibility of students paying their own transportation costs to and from the concerts.

Small Outside, Large Inside

By J. T. JONES

To get an idea of the amount of excess sheet metal being carted around by a lot of cars, take a look at the new Studebaker Lark. It's had the excess removed—27 inches of it.

It's also been relieved of some excess horsepower (11).

(about 160). In return, it has gained in economy, compactness, steering ease and handling qualities.

As for passenger space, it has lost none in any direction and in fact offers one inch more legroom in the front seat and two inches more in the rear. All these figures are by comparison with last year's economy-model Scotsman.

While it looks like a neatly-done job of sawing a couple of feet off a last year's Studebaker, in reality the Lark is almost entirely new, from the sturdier frame to the 90-horsepower, shortened-stroke flat-head six engine. The optional V-8, a smallish one of 260 cubic inches, has been given higher compression and a new intake manifold, both aimed at better fuel economy.

The Car Corner

You might think from all this that the Lark is a mere bones sort of car, but it's not. It has fittings and trim to equal those on many more expensive cars, and very nicely finished, too.

In fact, the overall impression it gives is of substantial quality in a smallish package—precisely the combination that has sold a lot of imported cars.

For a small car, then, it offers an astonishing number of big-car features. Its road behavior was another pleasant surprise.

For one thing, it feels solid (at 2,745 pounds, it ought to) and for another it's easy to manage. The steering, though light and positive, could stand to be quicker.

The Lark has pronounced understeer—going through a curve with the front wheels turned a fixed amount, the car tends to straighten out as it speeds up. Most cars have this characteristic, but the Lark more than any others I can think of offhand except perhaps the early Thunderbirds. There's nothing troublesome about it.

Brakes on the Lark are powerful if a trifle abrupt, and they are big for the car's

The new Studebaker has a fine, comfortable ride on good-to-average road surfaces, but it tends to hop some when the going gets choppy (I could name a 2½-ton car that does the same thing.)

The Lark handles well on a winding road, subject to the reservation just mentioned. Body lean in curves is moderate and there is no noticeable diving of the outside front corner.

I liked the appearance of the Lark station wagon rather better than either the two-door or four-door sedan—in fact the wagon struck me as a very practical carrier.

I think Studebaker has a winner in the new Lark line.

$100,000 Winter Work Project

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Work on the $100,000 Goldstream Park, 10 miles from Victoria, is being speeded so that the 147 campsites will be open for campers by March 1. Recreation Minister Earle Westwood said yesterday.

Mr. Westwood will go to Ottawa this weekend with his deputy, David Turner, to seek a substantial share of the $2,000,000 federal government has offered the province on a 50-50 share basis to provide winter work on parks projects along the Trans-Canada Highway.

Thirty-eight men are now working on the campsite area back of the Goldstream Inn and across the river. A temporary bridge was put across the Goldstream by the highway department last week so heavy equipment could be put to work on the campsite area.

Bulldozers have roughed out three miles of road and campsite entrances and graveling will start immediately. At the peak of the construction about 70 men will be employed and graveling crews may work on round-the-clock shifts.

"If we get the money, the campsite area, except for running water, will be completed by the end of February," Tom Moore, 24-year-old foreman told The Daily Colonist during an inspection of the project.

Plans call for a new rustic-type bridge to span the Goldstream over one of the deepest steelhead ponds on the river.

Within three weeks, all 147 campsites should be roughed out, ready for the gravel crews.

Last summer, trees were felled to make way for the roads and campsite area and underbrush was burned.

During the last three weeks, all stumps have been blasted and actual construction of the camping area started.

The three miles of road was bulldozed in three days this week and, although the roads are deep in mud, caterpillar tractors, gravel trucks and jeeps are able to drive over them. They are being improved daily.

Parks branch director Harold McWilliams said Goldstream Park will be "another Cathedral Grove," with campsites set among stately Douglas fir, tall cedars, maple and hemlock. He added it will be the biggest and best provincial park located close to a big city.

Ninety Classes Keep Night School Busy

Wood carving is only one of 90 courses offered to the more than 3,000 night school "pupils" attending classes in Greater Victoria schools nearly every night of the week. In this case, veteran carver Charles Seyfort instructs Mrs. G. H. Lofts, of 3880 Synod, a first-year student, on the "bear" facts of carving.

Dressmaking and tailoring, another popular night school course, has attracted 18 advanced pupils and dozens more in preliminary courses. Finer points are discussed by Val Coulter, of 2630 Deville, and instructor Elizabeth Altwein, of 1557 Wilmot. Greater Victoria school board will expand night classes next year.

Billy Learned About Banks

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"May I help you?" asked the banker. "I want to borrow $5," the boy replied. "What are you going to do with it?" "Buy a model aircraft-carrier kit."

Assistant cashier Mike Musante got out a loan-application form. Name? Billy Juster. Age? Eight. Married? No. Occupation? "I go to school—and help my father."

Billy handed over a baseball and glove. "This ball is just about worn out," said Musante. He and Billy agreed it and the glove weren't worth more than $3. "I've got a bat in the car," Billy said. He ran outside and returned with the bat. "I think we can lend you the $5," said Musante.

Billy signed a note agreeing to repay the loan at 40 cents a month. Also eight per cent interest, the bank's rate for small loans—an additional 40 cents.

CHICAGO—Silas Bruce, 53, was arrested by police who found him lying by a sidewalk collection pot, dressed in a Santa Claus suit and mumbling "Hurray for Christmas."

By DAVE McINTOSH
NEWBURGH, N.Y. (CP)—One of the key components in the North American Air Defence system and for the future counter-missile system is housed at Stewart Air Force Base here in a windowless four-story concrete structure.

It is the mammoth robot known as SAGE—the letters standing for Semi-Automatic Ground Environment.

The main feature of SAGE is the computer, which contains 55,000 tubes. It has 100,000 instructions stored on its memory drums. The computer knows what to do with the information fed into it and is so smart that it will reject false or distorted information.

About $100,000,000 worth of SAGE equipment will be installed in Canada in the next three to four years. SAGE is essential for the functioning of the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile which will come into operation in Canada in late 1961.

The basic information for SAGE comes from the radars which record all aircraft flights over North America.

The information is fed into the computer automatically by transmission lines from the radar sites or manually by operators using punch cards.

The computer correlates—in a minute—the radar information with information on all flight plans in a defence sector and identifies the plane as friendly or unknown. The result is shown visually on "consoles," which resemble radar scopes.

In the case of an unknown, the computer, on instruction, will determine the point of interception and automatically convey orders to the missile or interceptor.

At the punch of a button, the SAGE computer summons up within seconds full information for the air defence commander on an unknown plane or planes, number of interceptors or missiles available for interception and the state of the weather at the intercept base.

The one or two SAGES to be installed in Canada will be built in the triangle east of the Great Lakes and Canadian air defence command headquarters probably will be moved from its present location at St. Hubert, Que., to a SAGE blockhouse.

Use Windfall To Finance Public Power

Could Set Up Commission in Peace $3,000,000 for Oil Explorations

Although Premier Bennett may vehemently disagree, and financial experts might say it's impossible, the suggestion has been made by a reader that the $3,000,000 received for B.C. oil permits last week should be transferred to the B.C. Power Commission to take over the hydro-electric studies on the Peace.

The money, which came chiefly from U.S. oil companies or their Canadian subsidiaries, is a windfall for the B.C. treasury. It is the sort of money that in the past decade has gone a long way to making Alberta a debt-free province.

Not only does the B.C. government get this money in cash but it also stands to make considerably more if the land is found to produce oil or gas.

Strangely enough, the sum received from the oil permits sale is about the money required to finance the next stage of the Wenner-Gren studies on the Peace River, and presumably our reader is correct in his assertion that the transfer of the sum to the B.C. Power Commission would enable that Crown agency to do the job now being undertaken largely by foreign capital.

Indeed Premier Bennett's choice of the Swedish financier as the promoter of his north-land hopes has probably done more than any other political action so far in swinging public opinion toward the creation of government-owned as against private enterprise hydro-electric generation.

If the Peace River water is as valuable as the $8,000,000 share Wenner-Gren deal indicates it must be, then it would seem that the government itself would be just as entitled to sell its use as it is to sell its oil permits to the highest bidder just on the other side of the mountains. Water and oil, of course, are immiscible, but they are both natural resources.

Gamble Pays Off For Pacific Fleet

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

When the Orient and Pacific Line gets its complete fleet of nine ships plying the Pacific Ocean, the handsome old days of passenger traffic in these waters, will to some degree have returned.

The new British line—an amalgamation of the Orient Line and the Peninsula and Orient Line—announced a year ago its ambitious scheme to provide a regular fast service between the leading Pacific ports.

Those who had seen the demise of the Canadian Pacific's white Empresses, and the post-war failure of the Aorangi to make a go of passenger trade between Canada, New Zealand and Australia, were inclined to believe the British effort was doomed to failure.

However, the indications now are that the bold British gamble is going to pay off.

By tapping the U.S. passenger trade through calls at San Francisco and Los Angeles, in addition to the normal calls at Honolulu, Suva and ports in New Zealand and Australia, the O. and P. Line is getting pay loads that would have more than kept the old Aorangi going.

The traffic is growing, and it may not be long before the service is extended to Hong Kong and Japanese ports. At present the calls to Vancouver are little more than one a month. As the new ships come into service it is estimated there will be one ship every two weeks leaving the mainland port.

The newest ships will be considerably larger and faster than those at present on the run. One being built is of 44,000 tons and will have a speed of 27 knots.

At a time when the airways are sweeping the overland trade, there is now some evidence that for the long oceanic journeys where time is not the ultimate factor, the public is still attracted to the ease and luxury of shipboard life.

It Detects, Prevents, Records

An Australian electrical engineer, inventor of an aircraft safety unit, passed through Vancouver last week aboard the Orient and Pacific liner Oronsay on his way to the United States.

Robert H. Orgill of Perth hopes to sell his device to one of the big U.S. aircraft manufacturing companies.

The safety device is claimed to be a detector of faults and thus a preventer of disaster, as well as a recorder of the cause if an accident should happen.

Mr. Orgill's instrument is connected with all vital parts of an aircraft and it signals to the pilot any abnormality as it arises. Located in the tail of the plane it is housed in a rubber-covered sphere which would be ejected and thrown to safety in the case of a crash.

Mr. Orgill was put on the hunt for such a safety device after his brother was killed in a wartime air crash.

Britannia Mine to Reopen With Jobs for 350 Workers

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Britannia copper mine, closed last February because of low copper prices, will be reopened shortly, a spokesman for the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers said yesterday.

Ken Smith, a member of the union's district board, said a new agreement was signed Friday with Howe Sound Company, which owns the mine on the shore of Howe Sound, about 25 miles north of here.

Mr. Smith said between 300 and 350 men will probably be employed at the mine. However, Howe Sound officials in New York still have to give "final authorization for reactivation of the mine."

Britannia mine, which employed 800 men before, was kept open on a limited basis during the winter of 1957-58 with joint federal-provincial subsidies.

The union announcement made no mention of further subsidies.

Mr. Smith said the new two-year contract with the mine operators provides for the same basic rate of pay—$1.67 an hour—as when the mine closed, plus an extra five cents in the second year. In addition, the work week will be 44 hours instead of 40.

Like other candidates, Mr. Macallister will receive two tickets to a home game of the Victoria Cougars and, later on, a "good driver" certificate signed by the chief of police.

Who is Martin Pretorius?

Martin Pretorius, founder of the Pretorius Valley Nutritional Research Foundation, Escondido, California, first became interested in Nutrition while working for the Government in South Africa.

His work brought him in close contact with the primitive people in that country. He could not help being impressed by the fact that the primitive people of that country were FREE from most of the physical disorders afflicting civilized man until contact with modern civilization.

The result has been a lifetime of nutritional research. Thousands of people have benefited from his "COMMON SENSE" methods of living and eating... that help to keep the body young and vital, and free from nervous tension and excess weight.

Nervous Tension

NERVOUS TENSION is killing more and more people each year. Tension impairs circulation, and when your blood does not flow... all sorts of disorders develop, such as heart trouble, ulcers of the stomach, headaches, etc.

Tension is often responsible for people waking up tired, and the lack of sufficient energy to enjoy their work. Work should be a pleasure... NOT an ordeal.

It is almost impossible to live in a city today and not build up some tension... no matter how hard you try to avoid it. Learn how to overcome it in fifteen minutes. Every busy person needs this information as he can live long enough to enjoy the success hard work has brought him.

VANCOUVER (C.P.)—It took a long time coming, but the jubilation of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers' victory over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Grey Cup at the Empire Stadium was the most dramatic of the day.

The game, which was played in a rain-soaked atmosphere, was a hard-fought battle that ended in a 14-10 victory for the Bombers.

The game was a long one, and the Bombers were not in the best of luck in the first half. But in the second half, they came out with a vengeance and scored three touchdowns.

The day of the game was compared to the V-J Day party. They say there was as much action, excitement, emotion in the years' celebration. But whatever they were, the fans were happy.

Garden Notes

Old Salts of Shrubs

By M. V. CHENNETT, F.H.S.
SEAFRONT SHRUBS - (M.E.J., Victoria). The problem in selecting shrubs for the seafaring side of your home is to find subjects which can stand up under the effects of salt-laden winds.

The best of the salt-resistant shrubs is Arctostaphylos, sometimes called "Tree Pigeon" growing to about five feet in height and with silvery-grey, somewhat leathery, leaved branches. It is a good specimen for a small garden, which does not need to be a little salt in order that it will not suffer from salt-laden winds.

HEAVENLY BLUE HONOR PLANT (M.E.J., Royal Oak) is a good specimen for a small garden, which does not need to be a little salt in order that it will not suffer from salt-laden winds.

MOULDY WALNUTS (M.E.J., Victoria). The problem in selecting shrubs for the seafaring side of your home is to find subjects which can stand up under the effects of salt-laden winds.

Each of the large shrubs that put flowers last year has a good specimen for a small garden, which does not need to be a little salt in order that it will not suffer from salt-laden winds.

ISLAND'S FIRST FARM FATALITY

By V. E. VIRGIN

MOST URBAN PEOPLE who take a weekend jaunt out to the country are apt to be imbued with the quiet and peaceful pastoral scenes. They see the cows browsing in the meadows or lying down contentedly chewing their cud; lambs may be gambolling after their mothers, hens scratching in the farmyards or some geese waddling around squawking, and the farmer or his workers doing their daily tasks.

From the roadside it all looks carefree and pleasant and many envy what they think to be this independent and satisfying life.

They would be surprised at the farmer's reaction to their thoughts, but above all they would be more than surprised to learn that farming is a very hazardous occupation.

Deaths and accidents connected with this industry each year probably surpass any other single industry, but little is available in the way of statistics for comparison, and such accidents may never be reported in newspapers unless in the local weeklies.

Every year as new, faster and more complicated machinery is invented for farm operation the incidence of accidents is increasing.

Almost every one of us who came from a long line of farmers or who have been engaged in the occupation for any length of time have had relatives or friends who have either been killed or maimed. Many of us carry the scars of accidents ourselves.

Even before the advent of much farm machinery there were still many hazards. One could get killed by a horse or get trampled by a runaway team, not forgetting the greater menace of "Fordland the Bull." Even the most docile looking bull can turn almost instantly into a ferocious beast, and down through the years hundreds of farmers have been gored by the insane European countries special laws have been enacted regulating or governing the care of these animals.

The locomotive through its very stolidness has caused many accidents. Incidentally, the ox is still the chief beast of burden in two-thirds of the globe.

The fact that all phases of agriculture are getting more dangerous each year has prompted the B.C. Government through its Department of Agriculture Extension and Engineering Branch to consider whether or not it is advisable to institute a Farm Safety Program. The hope that with the cooperation of farm groups and a study of the nature and causes of many of these accidents may be made so they may be able to suggest certain safety measures to be practised so that many will be avoided.

All this brings to mind what was probably the first farming fatality on Vancouver Island, or for that matter, perhaps in B.C. itself.

The victim was John Dawson who in 1878 bought a farm in the Saanich district, located on Telegraph Road in the valley now usually termed Mitchell Valley. The original owners were coaxed people who sold to a Thomas Potter. He in turn sold to John Dawson and started or bought a brewing business in Victoria. Mr. Potter evidently considered there was more money to be made in malting barley or wheat than in growing it.

Prior to buying the farm John Dawson had like many others at that time been engaged in mining ventures. The last place he tried his luck was Cassiar. He must have met with a certain amount of success for he was able to pay $3000 in cash for the farm, a goodly sum in those days, and still have enough cash to buy all equipment and livestock necessary and most important of all to marry a young lady from James Island—a Miss Mary Munro.

He was a progressive type of farmer, ready to buy any new device that tended to produce better farming practices. Consequently he was one of the first to purchase a grain binder, an invention which revolutionized the harvesting of grain. This machine, as many people know, cut the grain and fed it into burlap bags automatically. In those days and for many years to come it was drawn by horses.

Many of the farmers scoffed at this new machine, even scorned this "new fangled contraption." To their surprise it worked exceedingly well, and ere long those who could not afford one had not a chance enough hired Mr. Dawson to cut their grain for them.

This it was that it was now the Salmo area he was working on, the farm of John Jones or John Brown. The Hendersons owned most of the land that is now occupied by Patricia Bay Airport at Salmo Village.

By some mischance the blade of one of the horses came off John Dawson, his mounted from the binder and went to the front of the machine to put it back. Something scared the horses at this juncture and they lunged forward knocking Mr. Dawson down, then plunging over his prostrate body, dragged the binder over his inert body, killing him.

This happened some time in September, 1881, or just six years after he had started with such high hopes on his salmish farm.

He was an honored and esteemed resident of the community and a member of the Saanich Lodge No. 89 A.O.U.W., which is nonexistent today. Whether it was a forerunner of today's Farmers' Institute or a labor group I do not know. Be that as it may there is at the Dawson farm a beautiful written and framed obituary from this lodge to the bereaved widow. It reads thus:

"SAANICH LODGE NO. 89 A.O.U.W.

"Mrs. Mary Dawson, Madame.

"We cannot except with great diffidence, attempt to express to you and your bereaved family the sympathy which we as a lodge of the A.O.U.W. experience on account of the recent bereavement you have undergone.

"You and your children have not only been deprived of the comfort and society of a beloved husband and father, but we as an order have lost a true and faithful brother.

"It would be unbecoming of our part to attempt to express our sympathy of the many virtues and excellencies which we have always found to be characteristic of your late departed husband and our brother. Suffice it to say that truly your and our loss is his gain.

"Knowing as we all do from years of intercommunication, thought and consistent work and consideration of our late brother we cannot refrain from conveying to you our own expression of sympathy and we trust that the providence who watches over us will guide and comfort you in the vastness of life.

We bid to remain Yours in sympathy, Hope and Prayer,
J. T. McILMOYLE,
Master Workman."

Mrs. Dawson married again, this time choosing her second husband from the same family of three boys George being the oldest and youngest son of John Jr. from Victoria. The other boy died young.

Only four acres remain in the family of the original one hundred. It was too much for George to manage so he grew older but the old farmstead as such a farmstead in every sense of the word. Hens and chickens, geese, sheep and a couple of Jersey heifers paid a welcome among the old and just as they did those 80 years ago when John Dawson brought his young bride to it.

Notes From Experimental Farm

Plastic Greenhouse Improves Rotation of 'Mums, Bulbs

DURING the past three years' experiments have shown the superiority of single-day chrysanthemums as cut flowers compared to the general run of garden varieties.

This has been possible only when the crop has been shaded for part of its growing period. For several months trial for shading this shade structure is being used to the most advantage. It is a very cheap and efficient device of plastic and bamboo, draped over a frame, and covered with a thin polyethylene sheet.

Purpose of this plastic cover is to shade the plants during the growing period, and to keep them from getting too hot. This method of shading is a substantial improvement for cloth and structure.

With the object of speeding the capital costs, the possibility of using the same structure for additional crops was investigated.

First experiments demonstrated the feasibility of a wintering crop of winter cabbages, followed by a summer crop of single-day chrysanthemums. This winter, however, a hot day in the month of May spoiled the crop for production to provide for the market.

These experiments have not only been successful in producing a winter crop and a summer crop, but have also demonstrated the possibility of using the same structure for a third crop of winter cabbages. It is now a possibility that the same structure may be used for a fourth crop of winter cabbages.

Experiments in 1958 have shown that the moderate temperatures of the unheated plastic house in April and May provide satisfactory conditions for starting an earlier crop, thus assuring higher crop production of single-day chrysanthemums.

For example, the first crop planted on April 11 and consisting of 100 plants of two varieties of winter cabbages was harvested on May 17. The second crop of winter cabbages was planted on May 17 and harvested on June 17. The third crop of winter cabbages was planted on June 17 and harvested on July 17.

These results show that the plastic house is a very effective structure for producing a winter crop and a summer crop, and that the same structure may be used for a third crop of winter cabbages. Experiments with this crop rotation are continuing.

Colors Come to Coast

THE FIRST AIR FORCE COLORS to be held in British Columbia have been turned over to 5th Air Division Headquarters in Vancouver from Tactical Air Command Headquarters in Edmonton.

At a recent handing-over ceremony Air Commodore A. D. Rosa, commander of 5th Air Division, accepted the Queen's Color and the Color of the Royal Canadian Air Force from Air Vice-Marshal J. G. Kerr who represented the Chief of the Air Staff.

Tactical Air Command Headquarters is disbanding on Jan. 1, and units under its command will now be responsible to Air Transport Command at Lachine, Quebec.

British Columbia will now have one of three sets of colors in the Air Force and it will mark the first time the colors have ever been west of the Rocky Mountains.

The other two sets of colors in the Air Force are held in Eastern Canada: one set at Air Force Headquarters in Ottawa and the other at Training Command Headquarters at Trenton, Ontario.

FIRST IN 1950

Since Confederation Canadian armed forces have received their colors in traditional ceremonies that have their links with the older British regiments and the national armies of an early England. But it was not until 1950, on the 25th anniversary of its formation, that the Royal Canadian Air Force received for the first time both the King's Color and the color of the RCAF, the latter being comparable to a regimental color.

These colors were consecrated and presented in June of that year on Parliament Hill at Ottawa. The presentation was made by Field Marshal the Earl Alexander of Tunis, then Governor-General of Canada. The colors are kept in the RCAF Headquarters officers' mess in Ottawa.

The RCAF Training Command at Trenton, Ontario, was presented with a duplicate set in June, 1952, and they are now the eastern custodian of the colors for the RCAF.

In the recent ceremony in Edmonton a second duplicate set was presented by Air Vice-Marshal J. G. Kerr and 5th Air Division Headquarters now became the western custodian of the colors. The presentation was made in the presence of the Queen's representative, the Hon. J. J. Bowen, Lieutenant Governor of Alberta.

ANCIENT ORIGINS

While the colors presented to 5th Air Division are comparatively new they had their origins in ancient times when some sort of insignia or flag was employed to distinguish families, tribes and nations. These early insignia were emblazoned on shields and standards and out of them grew the national flags and regimental colors that we know to-day.

day. Like all national and tribal emblems the colors are symbols embodying the spirit of the people who live and fight under them.

In the Middle Ages the military forces of England and Scotland went into battle with a full array of waving emblems decorated with rampant lions, springing leopards, spread eagles and other gaudily painted devices. These were usually the symbols of the knights and patrons who raised the forces. They served as visible rallying points on the field of battle and as distinguishing marks of persons of superior status.

Before the introduction of long-range weapons it was impossible to locate one's leader in the confusion and dust of battle until his distinctive insignia was held aloft.

To lose the standard often meant that one's leader was lost. The importance of keeping the flag flying was very great. As long-range weapons became more efficient the mortality rate of color or standard-bearers increased.

FIVE REGIMENTS

Regimental flags of today are the direct descendants of the historic banners that came into being sometime during the period 1333 to 1363. In that period the first five French regiments were established. Even today their distinctive colors of standards.

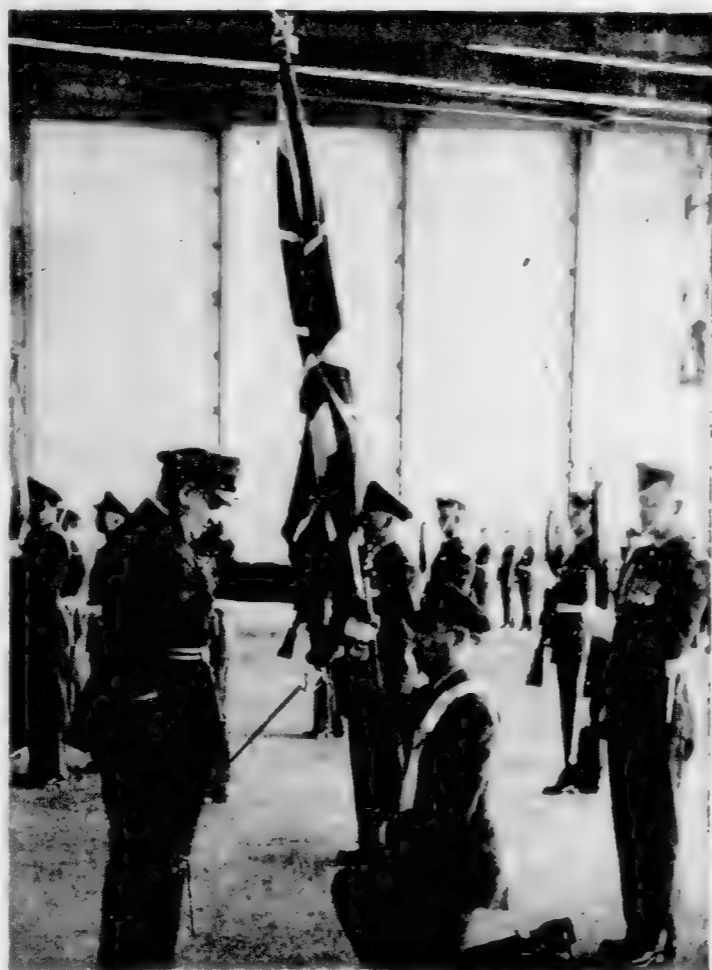

In Great Britain in 1841 a royal warrant was issued under which each regiment was to have only two colors. The first or King's Color was to be the royal color, the second or regimental color to be the color of the facing of the regiment with the union in the upper corner. Several regiments were also authorized to wear royal devices and ancient badges on their colors.

In 1880 the question arose in the British Parliament as to whether regiments should continue to carry colors and all commanding officers were asked for their views. Opinion favored the retention of colors for use in peacetime but they should not be taken into active service. The colors should be deposited in some place of safe-keeping while the regiment was absent on active service. An order was issued in 1902 giving effect to these views and it obtains in both Great Britain and Canada today.

Some of the most solemn and brilliant military ceremonies are connected with the colors. Prior to the ceremony of presentation there is the laying of consecration, when the drums are played to form an altar before which the colors are blessed.

COLORS BLESSED

Tradition traces the religious service back to the early days of the church. In 1060, Pope Alexander II blessed a banner of the Normans before they set out for conquest of Sicily, and the same Pope blessed the banner of William the Conqueror which was carried at the Battle of Hastings.

In the British Museum there is a form of service for the blessing of flags which from its style of Latin is considered to apply to the 14th century.

The consecration service to-day, as in ancient times, underlies the solemnity of the occasion. By custom, colors are not entitled to salute until they have been consecrated.

The recent ceremony at Edmonton was a solemn and impressive one. While it will establish tradition in western Canada it will perpetuate traditions that were born when the western world first gave birth to these very traditions.

THE STAMP PACKET

IN A SERIES of sales extending over the last two years a record has been established by the disposal of stamps formerly owned by the late Mr. Caspari of New York at one time a member of the Stock Exchange of that city. The amount realized by the sale of Mr. Caspari's stamps is no less than $250,000, the largest sum ever realized for a stamp collection.

Besides albums of single stamps, etc., a large portion of the collection was made up of extremely valuable covers, which very few people had been privileged to see. Though one Vancouver Island collector had owned a few years ago a collection of Mr. Caspari's stamps, it was not until the recent sale that the stamps were seen by many. At present some twenty sets of stamps are in the hands of collectors in the city. Though far from being a recluse, Mr. Caspari was the centre of a group of philatelists and very few outside that group had ever seen his stamps.

A set of ten stamps will be offered for collectors' interest in the future. When it is transferred to Australia it will be the first Australian stamp to be sold in a decimal currency and will be issued on the 1st of January 1971. Australian 1.7 stamps will be issued but will not be part of the "Christmas Island" and denominations will be expressed in Malaysian currency.

INSIDE ART

Paintings on Tour

By MEYER LEVIN

THE PLACE to evaluate art may well be outside its country of origin. When a book is important enough to go into translation, the author attains a definite status. When a painter is bought in foreign lands, one may assume it is not merely because of personal fondness that people buy his work.

Thus the status of French painting is high because it is in demand all over the world. Do other countries buy the works of American artists?

There is the question of tenacity of demand. We do not find the same amount of success for the work of Robert Rauschenberg, John Cage, and others of our painters who have been managed to get a temporary notice. The fact is that American art has not made much of a mark.

No wonder, then, that other nations have not been so successful in the world of art. The information that we have been getting is that the American art scene is not as vibrant as it once was. The state department has not been able to get a good deal of American art into Europe and Asia.

Art in Display Even 'Readable'

By MEYER LEVIN

THERE'S EVEN ONE abstract painting in the Henry Ward Ranger exhibition at the National Academy of Design, where conservative art is conserved. The rest of the 147 pictures, all purchased with the Ranger fund, are clearly readable. You can tell the "story" of the picture at a glance.

The exhibition is a collection of paintings by Henry Ward Ranger, a Canadian artist who lived in the United States. The paintings are mostly portraits and scenes of everyday life. HEADING FOR MATURITY?

Anna Marie Warns: 'You Can't Rush It'

HOLLYWOOD — Hollywood has watched Anna Marie Albergheiti grow up from the little Italian girl who made her debut with Bing Crosby as a blind singer, to a poised beautiful young lady with a night club all her own.

No one can pinpoint the moment when a teenager becomes a woman but the change, a long time in coming, seems suddenly to arrive.

"Less than three years ago," Anna Marie told me, "I wore peasant skirts and blouses with Peter Pan collars and I felt very comfortable with that 'little girl' look. But one day I came back from Las Vegas, looked into my closet, and I knew that everything there must be given to my younger sister, Carla. I had outgrown them."

"One thing I've learned about sophistication, you can't rush it. It is futile to think a lot of make-up and high fashion will make you look older. It is just the opposite because these things call attention to how young you really are."

"In Italy the girls don't try to rush into womanhood," Anna Marie observed. "She knows that her insides must match her outside and that maturing takes time."

We were chatting in the sunny living room of Anna Marie's new hilltop house. On the piano was a recent portrait of her.

"Your beauty has certainly blossomed," I commented, thinking of how she looked when we first met.

"I had a rather remarkable voice for a child," she explained. "I gave my first concert when I was six and it never seemed of much importance to any of us how I looked. We were so busy concentrating on how I sounded."

"Hollywood taught me the importance of my appearance but it has taken me four years to develop a style of my own," she went on. "I learned about clothes from experience and it was expensive. I'm trying to persuade Carla not to go shopping without me so she won't have to pay for her mistakes in buying the way I did."

"You have to have some sort of plan," Anna Marie confided. "You must find out what you need and what you can wear and how much you want to spend."

"I used to buy on impulse. I'd fall in love with a dress because of the color or the way it looked on the model. But it was not what I needed or could use. I call this my 'button and bows' mistake because usually these dresses had too much trim on them."

"You have to learn to recognize good clothes to appreciate simplicity and a classic line. Edith Head of Paramount was a great help in persuading me to have fewer clothes but expensive ones. She pointed out the importance of good accessories and how much they can add to a simple costume like a sweater and skirt."

"I believe that it is possible to get quality at a price once you find your eye and know what to look for. I found some suit sets with a perfect fit that cost only $3.99. I wore them to rehearsal, and everyone admired them."

"Trying to follow fashion too closely is a mistake unless you can afford to wear your clothes only one season. Extreme styles can never be carried over from one year to another. It is very discouraging trying to shop when I had to fight my way through displays of 'the sack and its variations'."

"You have a beautiful figure for clothes," I told Anna Marie. "Do you work at it?"

"I try to avoid overeating. I'm always uncomfortable when I do and I make it up the next day by dieting," she explained.

"I have the kind of metabolism that takes a violent swing," she continued. "I have put on six pounds overnight and have gone back to normal in one day by eating nothing but yogurt. It is a basic food and I like it. I don't believe in taking reducing pills. I think it's much healthier to find a diet that works for you."

In Hollywood we call it "going off the deep end" when success turns a person's head. I asked Anna Marie how she managed to avoid this.

"I don't think too much about success," she replied, "because it is not what other people think of you that matters. It's what you think of yourself. And all the fame in the world is not going to make you happy if you're paid for it with your character and self respect."

Invitations Recall Finery

By JAMES K. NESBITT

IN THE CREASE PAPERS now preserved in the Archives are scores of invitations to Victoria's largest and most fashionable weddings in the 1890s and just after the turn of the century.

Sir Henry and Lady Crease were invited to the wedding of Miss Mary and Mr. W. C. Ward, which took place at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. C. Ward, at 10, Grosvenor Street, London, on the 15th of April, 1896.

As the invitations came in Lady Crease assumed that the bride and groom would be married at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. C. Ward, at 10, Grosvenor Street, London, on the 15th of April, 1896.

There is no mention of the wedding in the Archives, but the bride and groom were married at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. C. Ward, at 10, Grosvenor Street, London, on the 15th of April, 1896.

THOUGHT FOR FOOD...

A CENTURY AGO every bride was given a feather bed and an iron pot as a dowry. Thus equipped she was supposed to be ready for housewifery. I imagine there were many tears over cooking failures... when a cake went sad in the middle blame was laid on a witch in the oven.

My theory about pioneer cooking mishaps is that the poor little bride lacked reliable recipes. Besides there were no standardized measuring cups and spoons. Grandma's foolproof cooking called for a pinch of this, a dab of that and butter the size of an egg. She measured flour by handfuls and liquids in the little blue pitcher. She added flour to make a batter thicker and liquid to make it thinner.

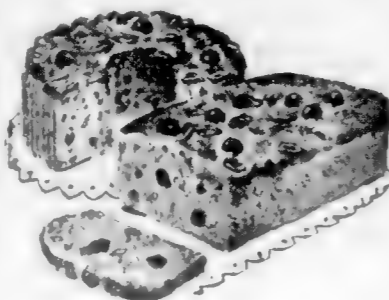

I have to admit that my country grandmother was one of the best cooks I ever knew but no doubt she learned the hard way. After cooking for 30 or 40 years she knew to the tee, of it when a cake batter was just right.

Well, today we don't have to risk or feel which is a pretty handy thing. We have recipes and we have standardized measuring cups and spoons and ready-made flour. I think we have to give the supermarket at least some of the credit for taking the guesswork out of cooking. But reliable recipes are the main reason why anyone today can cook with confidence.

I don't think there is anything that gives a woman more satisfaction than to bake a perfect Christmas cake. What a joy to open the oven door and find a beautiful, golden-brown, browned cake! What delight to cut such a cake and find it moist and fragrant!

Cake By Rule

Besides cooking recipe books I have a lovely collection of recipes given to me by interesting people I have met on vacations and by friends. These are recipes that keep their recipes as tightly guarded as documents of war and there are others who will sit right down and write out a recipe for you in the middle of a party.

... By MURIEL WILSON

The recipe for the Christmas cake I am going to tell you about today was given to me and we have Betty to thank for it. It is a good cake and I know it is good because I have baked it week after week. Based now, it will be nearly as good as Christmas.

First the fruit and nuts... I get these ready the day before. Three pounds of raisins and split almonds. One pound of cherries, four green pineapples, one pound of citron peel sliced thin, one pound of orange fruit and one and a half pounds of candied fruit.

I like to plump the raisins overnight... Soak them for five hours in a syrup made of two-thirds cup water and one-third cup sugar. After standing in this syrup overnight a half of the liquid will have been absorbed. If there is any syrup left drain off and use as part of the liquid called for.

Now cream one pound butter and two cups sugar. Add six eggs one at a time, beat all-purpose flour. After beating, add raisins with two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt. Sift some of the flour over the fruit to coat well. Add the fruit to the flour, to the creamed mixture, mix with one small tin compressed evaporated milk, one egg, one teaspoon vanilla, and two teaspoons almond extract. Pour the batter over the fruit and mix well. Bake will make two medium-sized cakes.

Line cake tins with two or three thicknesses of pressed brown paper. I bake my cakes for exactly two hours and 15 minutes in a preheated 375 oven. This seemed exactly right for these cakes. One large cake would take longer. A pan of water on the bottom of the oven while baking helps to keep the cake moist. Cost to make this cake is approximately $4.00.

Cake-making is something like bridge... you follow the rules.

gold and pearl metal brooch. The bride and groom, all dressed in white, sat on a couch with silver initials of the bride and groom, also presents of the groom. The two little girls had pretty smock frocks of white silk, trimmed with lace and wore Marie Stuart caps. They carried between them a basket of yellow primroses.

The bride effect was remarkably pretty. Amid showers of rice and the merry pealing of the church bells, the party drove off and the good wishes of their many friends.

Later in the afternoon a reception was held at the residence of the bride's father, Richardson Street, a host of friends attending to pay their respects to the newly wedded pair. A great number of very beautiful presents marked the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held by those who know them best. Mr. and Mrs. Baskin spend the honeymoon in California, and upon their return will reside at Cowan, the home of Mr. Baskin.

One more wedding in this kind in April of 1902.

St. John's Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding... when Miss Beatrice Constance, daughter of Mr. R. W. Jarvis of Vancouver, was married to Mr. R. W. Jarvis of Vancouver. The bride was accompanied by Mr. R. W. Jarvis of Vancouver. The groom was accompanied by Mr. R. W. Jarvis of Vancouver. The wedding was held at St. John's Church on the 15th of April, 1896.

The gown of the bride was of white brocaded satin, the design being in marguerites and gypsophila and trimmed with tulle, lace and orange blossoms. The long veil was kindly lent by her grandmother Mrs. Henry Rhodes—the bridesmaids, the Misses Phyllis Boswell and Prior were dressed in robe de chambre trimmed with string colored bands of velvet at the waist and front.

They wore white hats, trimmed with marguerites and carried bouquets of sweet peas. Each wore a half crescent pale blue enamel brooch with shamrock in the centre, the gift of the bridegroom. The little flower girls, Misses Florence Smith and Thelma Dumbleton, wore white hats with hats to match.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of pearl grey tulle in a black and white Irish design, and a bonnet of black and white with a bunch of pink flowers.

The music was especially selected for the occasion by Miss Ross Macdonald, the organist, and Mr. Hermann Robertson, a friend of both bride and groom, officiated at the organ. Messrs. R. B. Powell, Harry Brown, J. W. Hodgman and J. Lewis acted as ushers.

Mother Fights Off Death to See Daughter

NANAIMO — Two blood transfusions for a dying mother here yesterday gave new hope that she may yet see her Iron Curtain-separated family reunited before she dies.

Tomorrow may bring the news the mother is waiting to hear.

Mrs. Maria Baltz, 56, who doctors say is dying from cancer, has been clinging to life just to see her elder daughter, Mrs. Viveka Vlasarev, 37, now trying desperately to reach her mother's bedside from behind the Iron Curtain.

Adding to the hopes of a happy ending was the word yesterday from the family's champion, John Taylor, Vancouver MP and lawyer, who last week cabled Ottawa and the United Kingdom embassy in Sofia, Bulgaria, asking them to expedite the departure.

"I'm confident that we'll have the answering cables Monday," he told the Colonist by telephone from Vancouver, "and we're hoping they'll say that Mrs. Vlasarev is on her way by air."

The family has been cleared by the Canadian government for entry into this country, but efforts so far to get permission to leave Bulgaria have been her husband and children have been prepaid for some time," said Mr. Taylor. "There's a good chance that they'll be here before time runs out for her mother."

"The tickets for Mrs. Vlasarev's death staring us in the face and there's no ac-

Sharing the death's-edge vigil are Mrs. Baltz's husband, Valerian, 57, and another daughter, Mrs. Oliver Fabris.

The three fled from Yugoslavia in 1942 when the Germans invaded the Balkans. They went to Australia, then to England and finally to Canada, eventually coming to reside in Nanaimo.

The husband, Valerian, was separated from the rest of the family when she went to Sofia, Bulgaria, to marry Dr. Dmitri Vlasarev, 45, of that city. The Vlasarevs have been behind the Iron Curtain ever since.

"Everything possible is being done and we just hope and pray that my sister Viveka gets here in time," Mrs. Fabris said yesterday.

Mrs. Baltz is suffering from an incurable abdominal cancer and has only a few weeks to live, doctors have told the family.

tain immigration department is nothing like it is in Canada, Mrs. Fabris said.

"In Bulgaria, something like this is a matter for the police," she said, "and that makes it quite difficult."

Mrs. Fabris said her sister, her sister's husband and their two children — daughter Stanka, 14, and son, Michael, 13, have been trying to get to Canada for years.

But ever since they learned mother is dying, it's been a desperate race to get up the departure, she said.

NO. 296—HUNDRETH YEAR

VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1958

SECOND NEWS SECTION

City Opens Heart to Stricken Family

Food and Clothes but Still No Home

Generous Victorians have provided for most of the basic needs of the nine-member Van Nes family which has been living in an auto court since their rented home burned Thursday.

But Larry Van Nes, an employee of McGavin Bakeries, is still looking for a house for his family.

Glen Hamilton, executive secretary of the Red Feather Family and Children's Service agency last night said "the generosity of Victorians has been so overwhelming that most of the Van Nes family's needs have been met."

Plenty of clothing, food, furniture and even cash have been provided, he said. The agency is administering a trust fund on behalf of the family from money turned in at their office in Spadina House, 1951 Cook Street.

Mrs. Van Nes, with a baby and two children, fled to neighbors for help when their home at 1953 Oak Bay Avenue, caught fire shortly before noon on Thursday.

"The house was last night, it's hard to put into words but I'd like to thank all those good people who helped me get a new start."

Beats Last Year

Chest Drive Short

The 1958 Community Chest drive officially ends tonight — nearly $30,000 short of the $300,000 goal.

Chest executive secretary A. G. Gilmore last night described the drive as "quite phenomenal" in spite of the fact the goal had not been reached. "The campaign committee should feel happy with the results—a 23 per cent increase over last year," he said.

There had been only a five per cent increase during each of the three previous years when $210,000, $220,000 and $222,000 were given, he said.

Only eight cents out of each dollar collected will be spent on next year's administrative costs and this year's campaign cost, the executive secretary said.

Election Candidates

Fights Shape Up In Whole Area

Fights for all council seats in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt shaped up last night with the announcement of two new candidates and four more possible candidates for the Dec. 11 elections.

Action is also looming in Sidney and North Saanich elections. All nominations for the elections close at noon tomorrow at the various municipal halls.

Saanich looked like a quiet election with the retiring councillors: George Austin, Ainslie Worthington and Harold Todd — being re-elected by acclamation until Gregory C. Cook, 1091 Laburnum, announced last night he has submitted his nomination papers.

In Oak Bay nominations are relatively heavy with three definite public candidates, three councillors seeking re-election and two other likely candidates.

Coun. George Murdoch and Patrick Birley have resigned their seats to contest the re-election of Reeve Fred Norrish. Councillors seeking re-election are Fred Robinson, Geoffrey Ellis and Ralph Mathews. Opposing will be Gordon Elworthy, 3210 Upper Terrace, and lawyer A. L. Cox, 2847 Dunlevy.

In Esquimalt councillors W. E. A. Barclay, Vincent Rush and James Bryant are seeking re-election.

Only ratepayer candidate in the municipality is Mrs. F. A. Browne, 1231 Bewdley. Mrs. Annie McVie, 922 Lyall, said last night she has decided not to run.

In Sidney, three persons have announced they will seek the two available posts as commissioners on the village council.

Retiring Com. A. R. Cormack will not seek reelection, but Com. T. W. Ales will seek a second two-year run.

New candidates are Mrs. Arthur Casson and Lieut.-Col. J. H. Laroque, who has lived in Sidney about 12 months.

Central Saanich Reeve H. Rupert Brown is so far unopposed for his post but five candidates are seeking three seats which fall vacant.

Of the incumbents—Couns. Frank Grimshaw, John Windsor and Harry Peard — only Mr. Grimshaw has announced he will seek re-election.

Other candidates are Mrs. G. E. Ronson, president of the Brentwood Women's Institute for the past six years; Charles Harris, vice-president of Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce; C. W. Mollard, secretary of Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, and R. Gordon Lee.

LADYSMITH — President Charles Roberts has called a special meeting of Ladysmith General Hospital Board for Monday at 8 p.m., after the regular meeting this week was cancelled due to lack of a quorum.

Protest Made

Sisters' Haven Menaced

A planner's hopes for the future-straightening out of the labyrinth of streets near the B.C. Power Commission building has brought a letter of protest Thursday from the Sisters of St. Ann.

In the recently published long-term program for off street parking and downtown development, assistant city engineer Norman Worsley looked forward to a day when the streets could be rearranged.

An accompanying map showed Humboldt curving to connect with Belleville at Blanshard.

The sisters complained that this rerouting would cut through "the only recreational ground for the 200 senior high school pupils who attend St. Ann's Academy and for the Sisters."

This is one of the plans that is away, away off in the future. Aid Arthur Dowell said when city council received the letter.

Gun Blast Probe On

Oak Bay police are investigating a mysterious "shot, gun blast" which was heard last night by residents on Island Road near the New-Port Avenue intersection.

Police said two reports about the blast were received about 8:30 p.m., but officers sent to the area failed to find an explanation.

Fringe Benefits Granted

Shipyard Workers Take Six Per Cent

A majority of shipyard workers in 22 unions in Victoria and Vancouver have accepted a six per cent graduated pay increase offer, spread over a two-year period.

The vote, counted Saturday, showed 14 unions favored acceptance of a revised version of the conciliation officer's report, a union spokesman here said last night.

The result means all the unions will accept the offer, he said.

Fireman's Home Saved from Fire

A freak windstorm gusting up to 54 miles an hour snapped a power line in Colwood yesterday afternoon and set up a sequence of events as tangled as the broken power line.

More the excitement was over a fire captain's house had been saved from destruction by fire, a wide area had been without power or telephone service for more than an hour.

And the Colwood volunteer fire department had come through in the best tradition of the fire fighting services despite the fact that the line breakage forced men out of the alarm system and phone, silenced the fire department siren to call volunteers, immobilized the water supply and rendered smoke ejectors useless.

In spite of the handicaps, the firefighters saved a home at 3300 Painter Road from being destroyed by flames that broke out at the switch box of the home when the broken power line fused with the line into the ranch-style bungalow.

Much of the home's wiring system was destroyed and fire and smoke damage estimated at $1000 was caused by the blaze.

Colwood fire chief Dick Emery said the fire fighters were hampered by the fact that one end of the broken line fell across a manhole over the main water pipe making it unsafe to hook up hoses. The blaze was fought with water from the department's two pumper trucks.

The broken wires also tangled with the telephone lines, he said, knocking out that service also. B.C. Electric emergency crews finally restored order.

Some facets of the situation worked in favor of the department. Members working on new homes near the power break spotted the fire at the Bryan home and drove to the fire hall to summon help.

When they got to the hall they found other firefighters standing by in case of a call to the location of the power-line break. It was the first notice they had of the fire.

But because of the power failure it was impossible to use the loud siren that summons the firefighters to duty. The firemen at hand jumped on the trucks and used the sirens on the vehicles to call more help.

One of the men who responded to the hasty call was Capt. James Bryan, head of HMC Dockyard and also a member of the Colwood Volunteer fire department.

En route he learned the fire was at his own home. For many residents of the area the tragic feature was the fact the power failure blacked out the Grey Cup game on their TV sets.

Bumper Harvest of Herring

Fresh herring from Clavquot Sound on the west coast of Vancouver Island are being sold today to general public by the enterprising crew of the fish-boat Ocean Star III, tied up at the fishermen's wharf under Johnson Street Bridge. Bring your own pan, say skipper Earl George, right, and crewman Jonathan James. Crew has about 10 tons of herring for disposal to Victoria customers on a cash-and-carry basis, part of record-breaking harvest reaped by B.C. fishermen this year. — (Colonist photo by Ted Harris.)

Arbitration Board Set

DUNCAN Peter Stone of the Haida Nation, 67th party, has been named chairman of an arbitration board to hear a dispute over teachers' salaries in the Cowichan school district.

Representing the teachers' association will be Dr. RAY Duncan. The board's appointment is T. E. H. Ellis, Vancouver lawyer, who represented the board in arbitration proceedings four years ago.

No date has been set by the board for its session but the final adjudication, which will be binding on both sides, must be handed down by Dec. 31.

In conciliation proceedings the board offered the teachers' association a 6.7 per cent increase. The teachers' final request was for an 18 per cent increase, which would add three mills to the tax rate for the district, the school board says.

QUALICUM BEACH—Miss Margaret Clay, chief librarian for 28 years at Victoria Public Library, will be guest speaker at the Qualicum-Parksville Canadian Club meeting, Dec. 2, on the topic, "A Wandering Librarian."

From 1938 to 1943 she was president of the Canadian Federation of Professional and Business Women's Clubs. On her retirement from the library in 1952 she travelled in Europe and Asia for two years.

NANAIMO—H. Lee Briggs has accepted an invitation from Nanaimo businessman Ed Brewster to address a public meeting in the Quennell school hall, Wednesday at 8 p.m.

LADYSMITH Ladysmith school district 67 board has approved extension of leave to principal of a school at No. 4

George Elliott presently vice-principal of a school at No. 4. Fighter Wing overseas under the department of defence. His leave of absence expires June, 1959.

Mr. Elliott may be offered an extension of contract to remain another year. His application for leave has been approved by the department of education and principal J. M. Petrak.

NANAIMO Lack of leaders is hampering the scout movement in British Columbia. Dr. Desmond F. Kadd, charged at an annual Mid Island district meeting here.

The charge was made after the meeting was told many boys were unable to enrol in the wolf cubs because of a dearth of leaders.

District commissioner Ernie Stevens, re-elected for a second term, stressed the need for at least 20 more leaders in the district.

NANAIMO Building in Nanaimo will be down over last year but, considering the many strikes during the past 11 months, building inspector Ben Boers said he is satisfied with the total to date.

Up to yesterday, permits valued at $2,119,853 had been taken out of city hall. Last year at the same time, the figure was $2,724,000.

PORT ALBERNI Minister of municipal affairs Wesley Black will officiate at the opening of the new municipal building here on Dec. 17.

Work is nearing completion on the $200,000 concrete block building to house the local branch of Vancouver Island union library and health unit, as well as city offices and council chambers.

Located on the southeast corner of Argyle and Fourth Avenue, the municipal hall faces the new federal building now under construction.

LADYSMITH — The first Ladysmith Troop of Boy Scouts will shortly be taking orders for Christmas trees at $1 each.

The trees are donated by the Comox Logging & Railway Co.

Lovely Gowns Have Received Final Touches

Excitement is mounting daily as the great day approaches for this season's 19 debutantes—the United Services Ball at the Empress Hotel next Friday, Dec. 5.

On that evening in the Crystal Ballroom they will be presented to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross and make their formal bow to society.

Weeks of preparation have gone into choosing of gowns and all the little things so necessary for a young girl to know she will be her prettiest on the night of the ball.

Now lovely, all-white "coming out" gowns have had all the last minute touches and are carefully put away awaiting the final performance.

The night of the ball the debutantes, excited, flustered and a little nervous, maybe, will don their long, long, fine de se, satin, silk, jewels and flowers for one of the most important events in their lives.

Gathering at the Empress Hotel, shepherded by Mrs. R. D. Travis and Mrs. H. S. Boulton, the debs will await the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross. Then the thrilling moment will come when they walk the red carpet to the far end of the ballroom where they will be announced by A.D.C. Wing Cmdr. J. D. D. Campbell before curtseying before His Honor and Mrs. Ross.

To the strains of the debutante waltz the girls and their escorts will take the floor and for the rest of the evening the onslaught will be theirs.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann: My sister is in her late 40's. She was widowed less than a year ago. Her husband literally killed himself providing her with every luxury during his lifetime. She has taken up with a man who is worthless. He has in her life and is completely incapable of earning a dime. What can we do?—Mary Ann.

I do not believe you would dearly love to wash your hands of the whole thing. Your third

My sister has accumulated a few valuable stocks and mortgaged her rental property to put her friend in business.

Her bank account is almost depleted and all she has left is her home and insurance payments. Now he's urging her to get the insurance in a lump sum because he's learned that under her policy set-up this is possible.

The family is worried. Don't tell us it's none of our business. We would dearly love to wash our hands of the whole thing. But we'll have to support her when she is without resources. She's never worked

You've asked me not to tell you it's none of your business. I'm sorry but this is exactly what I must tell you. I'm also going to tell you that you don't have to support this stupid woman after she's thrown her money away. When your sister finds herself broke as a result of her irresponsible behavior let her go to work and support herself. She'll be much happier than she would be if the family pitches in and encourages her to be a parasite.

No Happy Home Here

Dear Ann: My problem is as old as the hills but I don't know the answer. I'm 41 and have been married 13 years. We have four children.

I'm not punning any medals on myself but I am good-looking, a smart dresser and keep a clean house. My husband makes fairly good money. I manage to save for the children's future education and we don't owe any bills.

If this sounds like a happy home, don't kid yourself. My husband has had a succession of girlfriends from the second year of our marriage. I'm up to my eyes in the hospital when I had the first baby. After that it was a girl in his office. Now it's the real estate agent who sold us this house.

What Ya' Gonna Wear

Dear Ann: I can only say to you that this extreme heat is the sloppiest I've ever seen. I've seen her in the back. Please forgive me for being no help whatsoever.

If alcohol is really 2 years of someone's life, I'd say for Ann Landers, now husband, "Help for the Alcoholic" enclosing with your request 20 cents, in coin and a large self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problem. Send them to her in care of this newspaper and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Dishpan Hands Not for Father

NEW YORK (UPI)—American husbands aren't so tied to the little woman's apron strings after all. Not when it comes to doing dishes.

A survey shows that women get the dishpan hands in the family. What's more, they seem content to let the men throw in the towel and retire to the evening paper.

A detergent manufacturer recently surveyed women in major cities in the United States. The firm wanted to know who would use a product it planned to introduce.

About 35 per cent of women interviewed said men should not do dishes.

Said many women, "Dishwashing is woman's work." Others felt that if a wife does not work outside the home she has plenty of time for such household chores. Many women felt their husbands should be able to relax at home that they have enough work to do at the office.

One wife commented, "Men look silly doing dishes." Most of the other women questioned believe men should help out only on occasions, and then just to dry the dishes.

FULL-TIME JOB

But 20 per cent of the ladies thought the men should slave over a hot dishpan. A few women said husbands should do dishes regularly if their wives held a full-time job outside the home.

In about half the families surveyed, Dad helps with the task occasionally. The husbands who do pitch in do so willingly. Or so the women said.

If husbands who help about 80 per cent do a good job, their wives repeated, and some women admitted that hubby was better.

BETTER WITH CHILDREN

The man of the house fares better when he has children. The women were unanimous in the belief that both boys and girls should help with the dishes. Most mothers start youngsters drying dishes at seven years of age.

"As soon as they can hold a dish towel," said the women.

Sex No Factor In Public Life

MONTREAL, (CP) — There is no such thing as a woman's viewpoint and a man's view-point when it comes to public affairs, says Lady Nathan of Churt. A governor of Redford College in Britain, Lady Nathan and her husband arrived here Thursday for a visit.

PEOPLE ARE PEOPLE

"People are people," she said in an interview. "Sex makes no difference in the approach of important matters."

She said she takes part in public life as an individual, not as a wife. She and her husband, Baron Nathan, former parliamentary undersecretary of state for war and now a member of the House of Lords, lead parallel careers, she said. She had found no animosity towards herself as a woman during her years in public life. She was determined that a frequent criticism of women — that their voices cannot be heard — would not be said of her.

"I cultivated a voice that and I've had no complaints," she said.

Lady Nathan in 1928 won a seat on London's County Council. She was the first woman member of the London metropolitan water board, which supervises London's district water supply.

Little house, 14 feet by 19 feet, has stood on Cedar Hill Crossroad just off Shelbourne for 50 years. Two of the district's longtime residents, Mrs. E. J. Merrett and Mrs. Fred Ellis, stand on the porch and reminisce about the people who have lived in it. (Photo by William Boucher.)

Just a Little House But, Oh, So Busy Over 50-Year Span

A very small house with a heart as big as a hotel is up for sale.

The house, which has its own miniature veranda, sits upon a minute portion of a 1/2-acre lot and looks about the size of a little tugboat about 10 miles off shore — or a napkin set all alone on a banquet table.

Even the For Sale sign is not much bigger than a calling card.

It contains only two rooms. The fact that this little house has performed a yeoman service as houses go.

It has been busy.

PROUDLY PAINTED

Always kept proudly painted, it is much older than it looks. It was built about 50 years ago.

Since that time over 17 different families have lived in it. Its occupants have been bachelors, widows, maiden ladies and families with children. They have been English, Scottish, Canadian, Dutch and Polish.

It measures 14 feet four inches across and is 19 feet deep, not counting a three-foot veranda.

The story of the house began about 1906. It was built by a bachelor, called Fred Newberry, brother of Mr. A. F. Newberry, and uncle of Mr. Roger Newberry, who still live in Victoria.

BROUGHT BRIDE BACK

But Fred Newberry had a sweetheart back in England so around 1911 he sailed to Britain and brought his bride back to the little house, which stood at 1500 Cedar Hill Crossroad.

When the First World War broke out, Fred Newberry went overseas as a sergeant. He was later captured by the Germans, made prisoner and sent to work in the infamous salt mines.

When released, he returned to his bride and the little house. As time went by, they had a daughter, but Mr. Newberry and his wife have long since

Bazaar Features Cup Game

Go Ti-Cats! Convener Yells

By EILEEN LEAROLD

Yesterday I went to the most exciting bazaar in the history of all the bazzars I've attended.

It was the Grey Cup—I mean the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church bazaar held in their spanking new and spacious hall.

There were Christmas trees dazzling with a myriad of lights and the evergreen tree tic going through a door at one end of the room.

Following this stream, I found the trail led up some stairs into an older part of the church and there—so thoughtfully placed by the kindly Presbyterians of Victoria—was a TV set.

"Come on, Ti-Cats!" yelled a dear old lady with white hair, wringing her hands in excitement.

Mrs. G. S. Hodge, turning the tea, said, "Who's winning?" She said Mrs. P. A. Andrew's Church, wonderful Bolt, in charge of the kitchen, and Mrs. J. B. Weatherdon were doing wonderful work with the hundreds sitting at the beautifully decorated tea tables.

"Oh Hamilton just made a conversion and has 28," said Mrs. F. F. Osborn, convener of the miscellaneous stall.
